TARIFF ROW WITH FRANCE LOOMS

FRANCE BOOSTING DUTIES ON GOODS MADE IN AMERICA

In Some Quarters Actions of France Regarded As Concerted European Effort to Break Down High Barriers Thrown Up By U. S. Coolidge Has Power to Take Retaliatory Measures.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10 — A bitter and costly tariff war between the United States and France loomed tonight as a result of the high tariff rates now being applied against American goods entering France.

In some quarters the French action in boosting duties was looked upon as the first step in a concerted European effort to batter down the high tariff walls around this country.

The tariff controversy has not lessened the tensity of Franco-American relations. Other issues of major importance with France which are still hanging fire include the war debt disagreement, the Briand perpetual-peace-treaty proposal the loan-refunding controversy and the row over the disposition of trans-Atlantic cables.

In a way, the tariff war has already started, even though negotiations for a new commercial treaty have been initiated by the United States. The new French tariff schedule, which went into effect on September 1, povides fo rduties that in the opinion of Secretary Kellogg are discriminatory. They are costing American shippers thousands of dollars daily.

Protests Pouring In.

Confronted with scores of protests from American interests, commercial observers here believe that if the situation is not soon remedied the new schdule will eventually serve to bar American trade from France.

Administration officials were "undecided" tonight as to whether a tariff war would be advisable. At the state department it was said that such a course, for diplomatic reasons, would be contrary to American policy and might in the long run prove ruinous.

It was admitted, however, that the president is fully empowered to take retaliatory measures and that manufacturing and shipping interests might influence him to take such steps notwithstanding the position of the state department in the matter. Under the Fordney-McCumber tariff act of 1922 the president is authorized, if the public interest so requires, to "specify and declare new or additional duties" on the commerce of other countries which discriminate against American trade by

The two youths are believed to have been going to Omaha to attend the University of Nebraska college of medicine.

Kaplo was driving west on O street at the time of the accident, his auto hitting the rear of the Johnson car and then careening into another parked at the curb. The accident happened about 12:30 a. m. Sunday. The damage was slight.

CROWD WAITS AS GOVERNOR PLAYS HOST TO A BOY

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 10—Governor Fred R. Zimmerman, today played host to a crippled youth hiking from Madison to Milwaukee while ceremonies attending the opening of a new commercial enterprise at which the executive was to appear were delayed pending his arrival.

John Newkirk, jr., who walks with crutches was passed by the governor and his son in a car on the highway. They stopped and took him in, in reply to a query from Gov. Zimmerman, the youth admitted he had eaten no breakfast.

"Well, you're going to eat right now," declared his host and the trio stopped at Watertown.

Meanwhile the crowd which had gathered to hear him dwindled. Zimmerman arrived half an hour late and addressed those remaining.

LINCOLN'S 28 SCHOOLS WILL OPEN MONDAY

Irving Junior High and New Hawthorne Buildings Ready.

ASSIGNMENTS ARE MADE BY LEFLER

Instructional Staff Has Final Meetings; Estimate 16,000 Pupils.

Twenty-eight Lincoln schools open Monday morning to approximately 16,000 children.

The final meetings of the instructional staff of 550 persons were held Saturday and Superintendent M. C. Lefler today announces the assignments of teachers to the various buildings. Old students registered last spring and pupils new to Lincoln were registered last week. Because of removals from the city it will be impossible to determine the number attending school until Monday.

Two New Schools.

Two new buildings will be opened Monday. They are the Irving junior high school at Twenty-second and Van Dorn street, and the Hawthorne elementary school at Forty-eighth and L streets.

The Irving building, grounds and equipment cost $700,000. A. E. Folsom will be principal and S. Adelia Winter the assistant principal. Thirty-eight teachers are on the faculty. Seven teachers are assigned to Hawthorne with Mrs. Sadie McCrystal as the principal.

The Bethany building and the Jackson high school, Huntington, Riley and Van Fleet elementary schools at University Place are now in the Lincoln system. The teachers in these schools last year have been retained for the most part and placed under the Lincoln salary and qualification schedule. O. H. Bimson, formerly superintendent at Bethany continues his uties as principal.

JACKSON WILL STAY AT POST

Neither Governor Nor Duvall to Quit Office Before Trials.

Expected to Attack Indictments on Statute of Limitations.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 10—(U. P.)—The governor of Indiana and the mayor of Indianapolis, defendants in the criminal cases growing out of Indiana's alleged corrupt political situation, indicated today they would remain in office until their cases were concluded. At the same time, a public demand for early trials was evident. They will be arraigned on Oct. 3.

While Gov. Ed Jackson's only comment upon the situation was that he "hadn't thought anything about it," his friends asserted he would retain the gubernatorial chair until his guilt or innocence was proved.

Jackson was indicted with George V. Coffin, republican leader, and Robert I. Marsh, Indianapolis attorney formerly linked with the Ku Klux Klan, for allegedly conspiring to atempt to bribe former Gov. Warren T. McCray, in 1923.

The alleged conspiracy involved an alleged "offer" of $10,000 if McCray would appoint James E. McDonald of Indianapolis as prosecutor of Marion county to succeed Wm. P. Evans, McCray's son-in-law.

Evans had resigned rather than take charge of the prosecution of his father-in-law, who was then under indictment for using the mails to defraud. An alleged promise of immunity from prosecution for McCray figured in the "conspiracy."

Mayor John L. Duvall of Indianapolis, also indicted by the Marion county grand jury which indicted Jackson and Marsh, faces hearing Monday on a charge of violating the corrupt practices act.

Defense of Gov. Jackson, Coffin and Marsh is expected to involve an attack upon the indictment on the grounds that the statute of limitations invalidated it.

The statute runs two years.

The state's chance of circumventing the statute of limitations admittedly lies in its hope of proving continuance of the conspiracy down to and including September 3 of this year, when a second alleged conspiracy to seal McCray's lips by threatening to impede his efforts to obtain a parole from the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., is charged.

Smith and Hoover Or Hughes to Make Presidential Race

HURON, S. D., Sept. 10—End of the bitter McAdoo-Smith deadlock over the democratic presidential nomination was forecast here today by Senator Thomas J. Walsh, democrat, Montana.

The Teapot Dome prosecutor declared his belief that McAdoo has definitely withdrawn from the democratic presidential race and reiterated his contention Al Smith was the leading candidate.

While admitting the wet and dry issue would come to the fore were the New York governor nominated, Walsh was inclined to believe the possibility of the eighteenth amendment becoming the dominant issue of the 1928 campaigns.

Hoover or Hughes will be the standard of the republican party, in the opinion of the Montana senator.

WORLD GIRDLERS LEAVE SHANGHAI FOR HOP TOKIO

Brocks and Schlee Start Most Dangerous Part Of Their Trip.

LAND MARKS ARE GUIDES NO MORE

Pride of Detroit Hazard Unequalled in Trans-Atlantic Hops.

TOKYO, Sunday, Sept. 11—(I. N. S.)—William S. Brock and Edward F. Schlee, American round-the-world fliers, who hopped off from Shanghai at 5:45 o'clock this morning, flew over Abunemachi at 12:55 o'clock this afternoon.

Start for Tokyo.

TOKYO, Sunday, Sept. 11—(I. N. S.)—The American flyers William S. Brock and Edward F. Schlee, hopped off from Shanghai at 5:45 a. m., intending to fly straight to Tokyo. They plan to land their plane, the Pride of Detroit, at Kasimaguara flying field.

Before leaving Shanghai the flyers telegraphed friends here that they were determined to fly across the Pacific. Their first stop will be the Midway Islands.

Weather conditions here were favorable to their 1,200-mile flight from Shanghai.

Plane Leaves Shanghai.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 11—(U. P.)—(Sunday)—The airplane Pride of Detroit, piloted by William S. Brock and Edward F. Schlee, took off for Tokio at 5:45 a. m., Sunday.

Hazardous flying such as not even the trans-Atlantic airmen encountered in their gallant ventures on the other side of the world confronted Brock and Schlee.

Since arriving at Croydon airport, England, after a flight from Harbor Grace, N. F., the airmen generally had mapped land marks beneath their craft.

With their departure from here, Brock and Schlee embarked on the first of four water jumps aggregating 7,450 miles, one of them so dangerous as almost to defy aerial navigation and all four representing tremendous odds against men and machine.

Brock and Schlee arrived over Shanghai at 5:30 p. m. today, alighting at Hungjao Field in Chinese territory at 6:10 after circling the race track where they decided the crowd was too great to attempt a landing. The descent at Hungjao was perfect. The fliers had flown 780 miles from Hong Kong.

After Tokio, the airmen expect

COUNTY SURE OF GOOD CORN CROP

Danger of Frost Practically Over Says Agent J. F. Purbaugh.

Lancaster is Almost Certain of a Yield of 5,250,000 Bushels.

Five and a quarter million bushels of corn are in prospect this fall for Lancaster county farmers.

And the prospect verges on a certainty, according to County Agent J. F. Purbaugh, because danger of frost is practically over.

It would take an exceedingly abnormal freeze to do damage here, he believes, and a light frost within the next week would not hurt much. Cool weather is needed if anything, rather than more heat.

The average corn crop here for the past two years has been 26 bushels an acre. This should be exceeded by 4 bushels. Mr. Purbaugh says. Taking 30 bushels an acre as a basis, he multiplies it by 175,000 and arrives at his estimate.

With only a small section of the country banking on any corn crop at all this year, cash prices should be $1 a bushel during the fall and winter, the county agent continues. Only 20 to 25 per cent of the corn grown here is sold, however. The rest goes to market on the hoof. Hog and cattle raisers probably will realize about the same amount per bushel of corn fed as will the cash sellers.

Prices on corn and cattle this year are both higher than last. While in 1926 corn was selling at 70 cents and beef at 10, corn is now selling at 80 and beef at 12 or 13 cents.

Present high prices are exp[illegible] to stimulate cattle and hog raising during the winter.

About 100,000 acres of wheat are grown in the county according to Mr. Purbaugh. The average in Lancaster was 20 bushels an acre. That meant 2 million bushels is grown, with a cash value of two and a quarter to two and a half million dollars.

PANAMA'S ENVOY CHALLENGES U. S. CLAIM TO CANAL

League Asked to Consider Continued Sovereignty Over Zone.

Proposal Temporarily Overshadows Disarmament Discussions.

GENEVA, Sept. 10 — (United Press)—A question of United States policy was brought before the League of Nations council in session here today when Senor Eusebio Moralis, ex-foreign minister of Panama, challenged America's right to continued soverignty over the Panama canal zone.

Overshadowing temporarily the subject of league disarmament which had been under discussion a short time before, the remarks of Moralis attracted considerable attention. He asked representatives of the forty-nine nations represented on the council to consider Panama's claims for continued sovereignty over the canal zone and outlined these claims in detail.

"Our soverign rights remain sufficient to prevent the United States from having claim or title to transfer of the Canal or the Canal zone to another country," Moralis said.

"This essential divergence has not

GAS BAGS IN A DISTANCE RACE

Fifteen Balloons Off On Gordon Bennett Trophy Cruise.

DETROIT, Sept. 10—(I. N. S.)—Amid cheers of a vast throng fifteen giant balloons cruised away from their moorings at Ford airport late this afternoon in the sixteenth international classic for the Gordon Bennett trophy.

The baskets of the giant 80,000 cubic feet gas bags contained the cream of the world's aeronauts as Edsel Ford, acting as official starter, sent them away at 5-minute intervals. The Hispania of Spain was first to soar aloft and W. T. Van Orman, American defending champion, in the Goodyear VI, was fifth away.

When the classic started in a light rain Germany had three entries for the first time since 1913; France, Belgium and Italy had two entries and England, Spain and Switzerland one each.

The distance goal is the farthest possible point attainable. In the event of calm weather dusk may find them hovering over the field, but an unexpected gale might take them far away, maybe to a distant state or some far-off point in Canada.

Weather prognosticators believed late today the ballons would drift in a northeasterly direction. It is possible that the one traveling the farthest may be known by Monday, but the decisive result may not be learned until later in the week.

WINGS OF DARING AIRMEN CLIPPED BY LOSS LIFE, STORMS

Disastrous Ending of Oceanic Hops Starts Campaign Against Reckless Long Distance Flights. Several Already Abandoned and Others to Follow Soon.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10 — (I. N. S.) — Trans-Atlantic flights are at an end until next year, according to every indication tonight.

Growing agitation, resulting from the series of tragedies over both the Atlantic and Pacific, coupled with increasing storms, have clipped the wings of the dare-devils of the air, although several of them have not yet abandoned hope completely of making the "final trans-ocean flight of 1927."

PLAN DEFENSE OF HARRY HILL

First Move Habeas Corpus to Free Youth as Reaches Chicago.

Attorney Hopes to Have Trial in Windy City on Change of Venue.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10—(I. N. S.)—Efforts to take Harry Hill, wanted in Streator, Ill., on a charge of murdering his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Hill, away from officers in whose custody he is being returned from Seattle, will be made as soon as the party reaches Chicago, it was learned tonight.

Petition for a writ of habeas corpus has been drawn up by W. W. O'Brien, noted criminal lawyer, who said it would be filed as soon as Hill comes within the jurisdiction of the local courts. The writ, O'Brien admitted, is part of a plan to have Hill tried here on a change of venue from LaSalle county on the ground of prejudice.

"The people of Streator have convicted him before they have heard his side," said the attorney. "He hasn't got a chance in the world to escape conviction down there."

Russell O. Hanson, state's attorney of LaSalle county, said tonight

WILL BRING BACK PAROLE VIOLATOR

Walter Schroeder, assistant state probation officer, has gone to McAllister, Okla., to take charge of John Bates, a Nebraska parole violator, who is just being released from prison there on the expiration of his term. Bates was convicted of horsetheft in Sheridan county, Neb., and sentenced in September, 1923, to a term of five years.

He obtained a parole in February, 1926, and two months later skipped out. Later he was sent to the Oklahoma penitentiary for an offense there.

The loss of the Sir John Carling with two lives, the Old Glory with three lives and the St. Raphael with three lives, one of them a woman, has started a campaign against reckless long distance flights that is rapidly extending around the world.

Capt. Frank T. Courtney, British air ace who was compelled to put in at Corunna, Spain, while flying from England to the Azores enroute to the United States, was ordered by the British air ministry this afternoon to abandon the flight. Courtney immediately began preparations to return home, asking further instructions as to whether to go back to England by plane or steamship.

Levine May Not Fly.

Charles A. Levine, owner of the trans-Atlantic plane Columbia, who has long planned a westward flight over the ocean from Europe to New York, announced in London that unless he could get away by Monday night he would abandon his attempt to fly home.

The trans-ocean flight of the Canadian plane Royal Windsor from Harbor Grace, N. F., to Croydon, Eng., was called off this afternoon. Advices from St. John's, N. F. quoted the two pilots, Phil Wood and "Duke" Schiller, as saying that they had abandoned the attempt because of the urgent suggestions of the British air ministry.

The German pilots of the German Junkers plane Bremen, who had hoped to make a second attempt to fly from Germany to New York before the autumnal storms set in over the North Atlantic, have abandoned their plan. Like Levine,

Chief of Police Starts Safety Drive with Opening of Schools

With the opening of the fall term of school, Chief of Police Peter Johnstone has started a drive to cut down the automobile accident toll among the city's school children.

The drive comes at an opportune time, following closely upon a hectic fair week, during which several persons were injured in auto accidents.

"Motorists should be particularly careful during the month of September," warns Chief Johnstone, who points out that drivers tend to get careless during the summer vacation months when the schools are closed and the streets in the vicinity of the school buildings are not crowded with children going to or from school.

"Last year 4,030 school children in the United States between the ages of 5 and 15 were run down by automobiles and killed, according to statistics of the National Safety council. Many of these accidents could have been prevented by a little caution on the part of the driver.

"Drivers should be sure that their brakes are in good working order and on rainy days, particularly where wet leaves cover the pavement, they should beware of dangerous skids. A skidding car is out of control and the best-intentioned driver in the world may not be able to avoid hitting a child when his car skids.

"In wet weather the surest way to avoid skids is the use of chains. Don't leave your chains in the tool box. Put them on, you may save a life.

"When you see children on the sidewalk put your foot on the brake and not on the accelerator."

Chief Johnstone has secured a supply of safety windshield stickers as a reminder to motorists in this September Safety Drive. Every driver should have one, the chief said. "And remember, September means—watch out for school children."

MANY VISITED STATE EXHIBIT

Seventeen Institutions Under Board of Control Had Displays. Nebraska Fair Visitors Gained Much Information at Booths.

Members of the board of control expressed themselves Saturday as highly pleased with the interest shown by state fair visitors in the exhibits of the seventeen penal and charitable institutions maintained by the state, which were grouped on the balcony floor of the agricultural building. They believe the collective display was of great educational value in the information it gave to many thousands of Nebraska citizens on what is being done at each institution to provide training in the useful arts for inmates capable of receiving it.

Supt. Ned C. Abbott of the Nebraska City school for blind had general charge of the exhibits, being assisted by officials and employes of other institutions. Upon approaching the section which they occupied, the visitor was advised that the board of control has under its jurisdiction 7,000 inmates and a combined administrative and working staff of 1,000 persons.

Each institution had its own booth with a representative in charge, always willing and able to answer questions.

The three state hospitals at Lincoln, Hastings and Norfolk, had displays of all kinds of needle and fine embroidery work, quite a large amount of which was sold from $1.50 to $15 an article.

There was the orthopedic hospital at Lincoln with a stock of all kinds of toys made by the boys and fancy sewing by the girls—everything from bird houses and miniature planes to hemstitching and fancy needlework of all kinds.

The feeble-minded institute at Beatrice exhibited some fine needlework and a splendid school exhibit, such as drawing and graded problems, which might be envied by those more fortunate.

The state reformatory for men at Lincoln made a splendid showing of ornamental concrete work. An eight-day floor clock, of the type manufactured by inmates, was also on display. These clocks are in demand by the public and are guaranteed by the institution.

The reformatory for women at York displayed fancy work in the display of luncheon sets, pillow slips, aprons, doilies, dresser and scarfs, that showed this home to be conducted much the same as the ordinary home, only it manages its departments by detail. They alternate in the kitchen, dining room, garden and to the care of a splendid herd of milk cows they keep.

The school for deaf at Omaha had all sorts of table covering, fancy work, and dresses, while the girls' training school at Geneva displayed embroidery work, bedspreads, etc. The school for the blind at Nebraska City, besides a display of fancy work of all kinds had one of its inmates stationed at the booth demonstrating his ability to read and write.

The home for dependent children at Lincoln and the women's industrial home at Milford, in addition to fancy sewing, had on display garden and farm products, which were all grown and cared for by the inmates.

The state penitentiary at Lincoln made an elaborate showing of all kinds of reed and upholstered furniture and men's shirts, mackinaws, etc. The soldiers and sailors' homes at Grand Island and Milford each had an interesting display of old army equipment, together with needlework. An interesting feature connected with this display was quilts that had been pieced by old ladies' over the age of 90 years.

The boys' industrial school at Kearney displayed all kinds of garden produce as well as a fine lot of canned goods, jellies and preserves put up by the boys. The hospital for tuberculosis at Kearney attracted a large amount of attention from a continuous lecture by the superintendent explaining in detail the different stages of the disease, illustrated by X-ray photographs.

SEEK TO BRING MEETING HERE

Country Life Group Is Invited to Lincoln in 1928.

Movement Inaugurated By J. D. Ream, Delegate From Nebraska.

A movement to bring the next national convention of the American Country Life association to Lincoln in 1928 is under way, and a number of local organizations and agencies will join hands in an effort to land it. The assemblage would attract to this city almost a thousand delegates from all parts of the United States.

J. D. Ream of Broken Bow, who has been prominent in a number of farm organizations, attended the convention held recently at East Lansing, Mich., as one of the representatives from Nebraska. Upon his return he called on several Lincoln people and suggested that there was a good chance of getting the next gathering here. Mr. Ream has promised to assist in realizing that object.

The chamber of commerce has addressed an invitation to the country life group to make Lincoln its meeting point next year. Information concerning the capital city's hotel accommodations, the state university and agricultural college, the state fair, the activities of farm organizations conducted from here and other matters of particular interest has been forwarded to the president of the organization, K. L. Butterfield of East Lansing.

Dean E. A. Burnett of the college of agriculture, Secretary C. B. Steward of the Nebraska farm bureau federation and others will also extend invitations to come to Lincoln. Governor McMullen's assistance will be asked along the same line.

The following communication has been mailed by State Superintendent C. W. Taylor to Mr. Butterfield, who is president of the Michigan agricultural college at East Lansing, as well as head of the country life association:

My dear President Butterfield:

Nebraska is anxious to have the honor of entertaining the national meeting of the American Country Life association. We want you to know that this department extends you an invitation to consider Lincoln for your annual meeting place next summer.

This department pledges you its support and hearty cooperation in making the meeting the greatest possible success should you decide to come to Lincoln next summer. Next to Michigan, Nebraska is possibly the greatest state in the Union, if not the greatest. There is something in the ozone of these wild western plains out here that goes to develop some of the best things to be found in rural life.

Kindly give us serious consideration. Very truly your,
CHARLES W. TAYLOR,
State superintendent.

WESLEYAN NOTES.

Dr. Charles Fordyce, '93, has returned from Rock Springs, Wyo., where he delivered a series of addresses before the joint teachers institute of Lincoln and Sweetwater counties, August 30 to September 2.

PRICE TREND ON INDUSTRIALS IS ON AN UP TREND

Profit Taking and Speculative Selling Fails to Check Move. Forcing Lower Rediscount Rate at Chicago Outstanding Event.

BY W. S. COUSINS.
(International News Service Financial Editor.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 10—The vigorous and aggressive upward movement in industrial stock prices continued with hardly an interruption this week. Some evidences of the tightening of the money situation, together with the weakening of the technical position of the market by the spectacular advances, accounted for a considerable volume of profit taking and speculative selling at the week end, but the general course of prices was upward.

Outside of the mercantile houses and a few of the manufacturers of popular motorcars there was little in the business reports of the week to stimulate purchasing of speculative stocks. Steel production is now down about 16 per cent from last year, railroad earnings off about 27 per cent, cast iron pipe prices at low water for the past three years, oil markets unsettled by overflow and copper buying mostly on a hand-to-mouth basis.

Rate Forced Down.

From the purely financial and banking atmosphere the forcing of the Chicago Reserve bank by the Federal Reserve board to lower the rediscount rate from 4 to 3½ per cent was easily the outstanding event of the week and the incident may precipitate the most violent controversy in banking circles in a decade.

Should the Chicago bank directors bring the matter to the courts in order to establish clearly the jurisdiction of the reserve board it is believed that the latter board may have some difficulty in establishing its position, while from the banking standpoint it is claimed that the "easy money" situation is the chief factor in the present wild rise of speculative stock prices, which in some cases have apparently advanced beyond the level where they can be maintained by the production and earnings capacities of the plants behind the issuing companies.

Cotton Price Kites.

Cotton jumped $10 a bale as the result of a new 800,000 bale shrinkage in the government's crop estimate. This was a logical move in view of the enormous world wide demand for raw cotton and any further destruction of the crop by the boll weevil would ensure a much higher range of prices. Already cotton has moved up from 12c a pound to 24c and cotton bulls are predicting 30c a pound before the end of the season.

A few of the railroad stocks participated in the new rise of prices, but, with the exception of New York Central, which acted as the bell wether for the rails, and a few of the better grade of dividend shares, activity in this section of the stock market was unusually small.

Financing Below Average.

New financing for the week was also below the average, aggregating about $48,000,000. This does not include a loan of $25,000,000 of 5-year 6-per cent bonds to the Deutschebank of Berlin, proceeds of which will be devoted to the short-term financing of German industrial enterprises. The bond market was firm with a higher price trend in home and foreign government and corporation issues.

Commodity price trends were higher. Bradstreet's reported the food index number at $3.24, against $3.20 last week, while Dun's Review found 46 advances and 29 declines in 75 changes of commodity wholesale prices.

Bank clearings for the week aggregated $8,416,000,000, increase of 17 per cent over the same week last year.

More Marble for Halls of Capitol

It is probable that the state capitol commission will order the hallways on the main floor of the new state building refinished in marble. This has already been done in the middle corridor on the south side, making such a marked improvement that it is thought the building would present a much more impressive appearance if the same change were carried out all the way around.

If the marble is installed, it will form a wainscoating 6 or 7 feet high. This would resist discoloration and dirt, such as now offend the eye.

The executive office suite, from which Governor McMullen and his associates moved out two weeks ago, is all torn up. In the large reception hall the wide oak flooring has been taken up, to be replaced with tilework, and some of the decorative woodwork around the sides has been torn off for something else to be substituted. The new ornamental plaster ceiling in the secretary's office is finished, but the high wooden wainscoating is not yet installed. The governor's private office looks like a cyclone wreck.

Canvas paintings are to cover the ceilings of the private office and the reception chamber. In the former room, ornamental plaster casings will be put in around the windows.

Dr. Worcester was granted a doctor's degree at the University of Ohio, Athens, O., and was associate professor in the department of psychology there. He also holds bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Colorado.

Dr. Worcester has had experience in public schools and in the state Teachers college at Emporia, Kas., is the author of a number of articles on educational subjects, and the joint author of a work on educational measurements.

MEETINGS OF OPTIMIST CLUB START TUESDAY

The first fall meeting of the Optimist club of Lincoln will be held Tuesday, September 13, at 12 o'clock in the chamber of commerce dining room. Prof. H. E. Bradford, of the University of Nebraska agricultural college, will be the speaker for the occasion. The program has been arranged by Bill Rempke.

The board of governors of the club has outlined a boys work program as well as other activities for the club to engage in during the fall and winter months. These activities will be discussed at next Tuesday's meeting. A number of social events, which will include the ladies, have been planned for the winter season.

CENSUS TO HELP CHEST CAMPAIGN

Charity Workers Will List Employes in All Lincoln Firms.

A business census of Lincoln and its suburbs will be started on Monday afternoon as the first step in Community Chest campaign, which will be held this year during the first week in October, it was announced this morning by Charles B. Towle, president fo the Lincoln Community Chest.

"Our workers will call at every office and place of business in the city, with the exception of the larger industrial plants, offices and stores," said Mr. Towle, "for the purpose of listing the name, address and position of all officials and employes from presidents and managers to night watchmen and office boys. This will give us the most complete and up-to-date list of prospective givers to the Chest that can be secured. It will save the time and temper of solicitors and contributors when the campaign is conducted in October.

"It should be clearly understood that no solicitation for funds will be made by the census takers, we simply want the names and addresses of all gainfully employed in the city. I want to urge the heads of business institutions to facilitate the work of the census, as this systematic plan is at the basis of successful chest campaigns the country over."

PHONE COMPANY AT NELIGH WILL REBUILD SYSTEM

NELIGH, Neb., Sept. 10—The Madison Telephone company, which now owns the local system, is getting in readiness for the entire reconstruction of its street lines in this city. It is making arrangements with the Interstate Power company to use its poles in this work. Engineers of both companies are working out the changes in the telephone distributing system to accommodate both companies and when this is completed work will start at once, it is announced.

This means that all poles and wires are to be down from Main street and other business streets and in fact they all go into the alleys all over the city where it is possible to so place them. The unsightly poles on the business streets particularly have been an eyesore, but their location in the streets has been the source of much bad service on account of contact with trees.

The rebuilding of both the telephone and electric distributing systems will also be a big improvement in service, as the old wiring in many cases is obsolete and inadequate. The new telephone lines will all be in cables.

SALVATION ARMY BUDGET ADOPTED

Advisory Board Approves Expenditure of $20,000 in Year.

A Salvation Army budget for the coming year of $20,000 was adopted at a meeting of the advisory board Friday night at the Grand hotel. The board decided to stage its local appeal for funds the week of October 30 to November 5.

Prof. Charles W. Taylor, president of the advisory board, presided at the meeting. Staff Captain Victor Lundgren and Ensign Agnes DeBolt of Omaha were present. Ensign DeBolt was making her first visit to Lincoln since she became head of the state finance department.

The Salvation Army drive this year will again be conducted separately from the Community chest drive. The report given Friday showed that the work has increased during the year. Three thousand one hundred and seventy families have been visited, 401,863 pounds of coal donated, 635 grocery orders given, 3,849 garments given needy persons and 7,058 persons aided. The evangelistic work shows a decided incerase, 8,580 meetings have been held with an attendance of 319,034.

Adjutant and Mrs. Ward have been in charge of the local Salvation Army since Ensign and Mrs. M. Keene left Lincoln last June.

McGRAW CASE IS SET FOR TUESDAY

Charges filed by a number of McPherson county citizens and county officers, past and present, against J. A. McGraw, county attorney, asking that he be suspended for alleged failure to prosecute bootleggers, and a counter showing by the accused official, supported by affidavits of some of his friends and several of the present county officers, are to be presented before Governor McMullen in a hearing next Tuesday.

McGraw claims that the charges were filed by disgrutled persons, several of whom were defeated for re-election a year ago.

He is the only lawyer in the county, and his opponents allege that it has been necessary at times to employ outside counsel in order to have the public's interests properly protected.

FARMERS HELP IMPROVE ROADS

Merrick County Men Donate Gravel Which County Distributes.

State Senator Osterman and Brother Inaugurate Fashion.

Nebraska's good roads movement is receiving an impetus from some unexpected sources throughout the state; and despite the failure of the last legislature to pass the 3-cent gasoline tax bill it is highly probable that ways and means will be found for substantially improving an extensive mileage of farm-to-market roads during the next year, in addition to the continuing developmentof the state highway system proper.

Merrick county is setting an example in local roadbuilding which has attracted considerable attention. There the county board has been able to have a large amount of work done in certain localities by receiving donations of gravel from farmers who own land along the Platte river. There are unlimited quantities of the material there, and all the county board has to do is pay for hauling and spreading it.

State Senator Theo M. Osterman and his brother, Ed Osterman, who are farming in partnership, started the fashion of giving gravel to the county. They offered to let the county board have all it wanted if the board would make use of it on nearby roads. A year ago 276 loads were hauled out to surface one thoroughfare. This year 546 more loads were taken to improve another road. Now other farmers are coming to the front with propositions of the same kind. The county board can get all the gravel it can arrange to use, without a cent of cost except for the labor involved.

A good deal of the soil in Merrick county is a natural mixture of sand and clay which makes a very good roadbed without mixing in additional gravel. But there are some gumbo patches here and there which need to be surfaced.

Can Do Same Elsewhere.

All the Platte river counties in Nebraska, as well as many others, have gravel beds that can be got at easily. The same method of improving country roads that has been adopted in Merrick county can be applied more or less generally throughout the state. Farmers have a way of accomplishing tasks that appear insurmountable to city and town dwellers except by the expenditure of large sums of money.

Automobile license revenues, of which 70 per cent collected in each county is retained by it, are available for building and maintaining local highways. Each county also collects road taxes from its citizens. Where land owners are willing to contribute gravel, the money so raised can be made to go a good deal farther than it would otherwise.

The state pays all the way from 10 cents to 25 cents per square yard for the graveling of its highways 2 or 3 inches at a time. This is at the rateof $1.80 to $5.40 per cubic yard for the material in place on the road. The gravel itself, however, costs only 60 to 70 cents per cubic yard. The rest is transportation expense, labor and contractor's profit.

Where a county uses nearby gravel gravel donated by farmers, to improve its roads, the saving may be much as $1 per cubic yard, as it would have to pay the laid-down price, including transportation and drayage charges, for shipped-in gravel.

Road Conditions

The following road report was issued Saturday afternoon by the tourist bureau of the Lincoln Automobile club.

Pawnee City People Proud Of Their Band.

(Special to The Star.)

PAWNEE CITY, Neb., Sept. 10—People of Pawnee City are unusually proud of their school band, which took second place in the Class A contest at the state fair. They are particularly gratified at the showing their young musicians have been able to make because of the unusual youth of the personnel and for the further reason that none of the members has had training dating prior to November, 1925.

At the time mentioned the High School band was organized under the auspices of the Public Service club, Dr. W. C. Boyer being chairman of the music committee. A junior band was organized one year later, both bands being combined last June, making a total membership of 52, the ages being from 10 to 17 years.

This organization, which has been trained and at all times under the direction of Prof. August Hagenow, is supported by Pawnee City by a tax levy, and also by the Public Service club. Lessons for members of the band are free. Concerts are given weekly during the summer season on the court house square.

Owing to the rules for the state fair contest only 36 of the members of the band could appear there, these consisting of 12 girls and 24 boys. The names of those in the contest are: Katherine Alcorn, Jane Sawyer, Maxine Herries, Elnora Rinne, Laura Smutz, Jeanette Osborn, Cleta Mae Avery, Mary Vacek, Ruth Bellows, Patricia Brown, Olive McClure, Evelyn Osborn, Robert Barclay, Walter Baker, Edwin Rose, James Snyder, George Reed, Ted Sawyer, Ronald Booth, Robert Bookwalter, Dale Parker, Dwane Brown, J. R. Peckham, Charles Linderman, Francis Parker, William Colwell, Clifford Brown, Ernest Friedly, Maurice Reid, Orlie Smith, Willard Hartman, Stanley Mach, Edwin Bloss, Leroy Giles, Donald Barclay, Harry Flory, Jr.

"GREEKS" ANNEX HIGHEST GRADES

Fraternity and Sorority Members Have the Best Records.

Women Students Generally Surpass Men in Scholastic Marks.

Fraternity and sorority members ranked higher as scholars than nonmembers at the University of Nebraska last year, while women generally did far better than men in the business of getting grades, according to a report just issued by the dean of student affairs.

The index figure for the school, first semester, was 206. compared with 165 for men and 249 for women.

Alpha Chi Omega and Farm House held first and second places respectively among the fraternities during both semesters. Sigma Tau Delta was leading sorority first semester, and Pi Beta Phi held that honor the second semester.

Palladian walked off with literary society honors. The dormitory at 1232 R street was first during the initial semester while that at 410 North Thirteenth street, which had been last in the preceeding semester, was first in the second. Following are more detailed figures, giving the index figures for both semesters, as well as the percentage of credits, failures and delinquencies:

STATE PROMISED GOOD BUSINESS

Babson Says Outlook for 1928 Shows Era of Prosperity.

Low Interest Rate and Declining Prices Divides Opinions.

WELLESLEY HILLS, Mass., Sept. 10— Business conditions in the United States today were moderately good, according to Roger W. Babson, statistician, chiefly because the country has an excess of everything except religion.

In a speech before the fourteenth annual business conference he pointed out that there could be no panic with money rates as easy as they are. Also, he said, a great rush of prosperity is impossible so long as commodity price continue to decline. He said that there is a peculiar paradox in the business world of this country today.

"I refer to the fact that we are in a period of declining interest rates which heretofore has never been followed by a panic," he said.

"And at the same time we are in a period of declining commodity prices which hertofore has never been followed by good times."

Never Existed Before.

"History shows that it always has needed high interest rates to bring on a panic; that it has always needed increasing commodity prices to bring on prosperity and that the two factors have never before existed simultaneously.

"Yet today we have the apparent paradox of low interest rates and declining commodities prices. This probably explains the marked difference of opinion as to the future which exists among the best financial and business leaders.

"The volume of business today is good, but competition is severe and makes for low profits.

"Statistics indicate that this same condition will extend into 1928. We cannot expect a panic so long as money continues easy; nor can we expect better times so long as commodity prices continue to decline.

Building on Decline.

"Apparently a definite turn downward in volume of new building is under way. The current drop in building permits to about 28 per cent below a year ago shows what must be expected for 1928 in house building.

"Yet, in some sections the building outlook is still good. The central west and northwest districts are expected to make a good showing in 1928 because of crop optimism and these sections should be good markets for materials.

"The south also promises some increase in building as a result of higher cotton and corn prices."

He said business should remain good in Nebraska, Kansas, Texas, California, North Carolina, South Carolina, Oklahoma, Missouri, Georgia and Alabama. He also said there would be improved conditions next year in New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Ohio.

Congested Traffic of Past Week Takes Heavy Toll; 35 Accidents

Two are dead, eight persons are seriously injured and many are suffering from minor injuries as the result of thirty-five accidents in and near Lincoln during the past week. Of the total 28 were auto accidents.

Thomas Brick died of burns received when he came in contact with a live wire carrying 2,300 volts, while he was working on the roof of the gas plant, and J. Harry Cantlin of Alliance, a university student, died of injuries received when the car in which he was riding overturned near Gretna after it had struck a steer.

All of the eight persons seriously injured were hurt in auto accidents, most of them within the limits of the city. Three of the eight were pedestrians, the others being in cars which collided with other machines or overturned.

Seventeen persons received minor injuries, the majority of them in auto accidents. Four of them were pedestrians and three were riding bicycles. Nineteen of the auto accidents were caused by collisions. Two cases of three cars being in a smash-up were reported to police.

Note In Bottle Picked Up Off France Says Nungesser Landed Off Sable Island

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 10—(INS)—What the French government considers the first real word of the missing Captains Nungesser and Coli, who disappeared with their plane, the White Bird, in an attempted flight from Paris to New York, was revealed in an announcement tonight by French Consul Gaboury.

According to the announcement the two French flyers sent the message while off Sable island, a narrow stretch of treacherous sand ninety miles southeast of the eastern tip of Nova Scotia. The message was enclosed in a bottle and was picked up off Gironde, France, it was said.

Gaboury said he had received the message from Baron de Vitrolles, French consul general of Canada, stationed in Montreal, who had been notified by the foreign department in France. The message read:

"Papers found in bottle off Gironde, France, as follows:

" 'May, 1927.

" 'We landed 20 miles off Sable island.'

"(Signed) Nungesser and Coli."

"Nungesser's mother recognizes the writing of her son. Pray the government to look around the island, which is the one indicated at 180 kilometers east of Halifax."

Sable island, often called the "sailors' grave," is a menace to ships plying between Europe and America. Ocean travel gives it a wide berth. It has a colony of 200 to 300 persons on it and is in touch with the mainland, but rarely, when supplies are brought to the island by a steamer from Halifax.

Consul Gaboury said late tonight that his investigations had tended to cast doubt on the reported message from the airmen.

The consul said he had talked with Captain Bordeaux of the steamer Ville d'Ys, which had recently been in the vicinity of Sable island.

"The currents in the neighborhood of Sable island are such that it is impossible that a bottle could have drifted from the vicinity of the island to the coast of France. The bottle would have drifted either due east or southward," Captain Bordeaux told the consul.

"At the time of the Nungesser flight in May 400 fishermen were active in the neighborhood of Sable island, because this has been a good season there. Some of these men would have seen the plane or its wreckage. I heard no reports of it whatever."

WALKOUT OF MOVIE EMPLOYES AVERTED

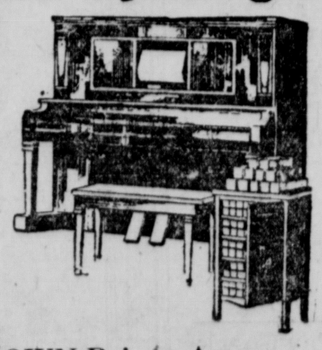

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Sept. 10—(I. N. S.)—The threatened walkout of 5,000 members of the Los Angeles Amusement Federation, which would have darkened the city's movie and vaudeville houses tonight, was averted this afternoon when it was announced a settlement of differences between theater owners and union musicians, stage hands and motion picture operators would be reached before night.

SECURITY PACT HAS POOR SHOW

British Claim Cannot Guarantee All Frontiers Europe.

Esteems League But Will Not Sacrifice Empire For It,

GENEVA, Sept. 10—(I. N. S.)—Chances for Poland's proposed security pact kuaranteeing the present frontiers in eastern Europe looked decidedly slim tonight as the result of today's developments in the League of Nations assembly.

With every delegate present and the spectators' galleries filled with a tense and silent crowd, Foreign Secretary Sir Austen Chamberlain of England delivered a speech late this afternoon answering the allegations of the little nations that the big powers were conducting secret agreements among themselves.

Sir Austen admitted that the signatories to the Locarno agreement held a number of secret meetings, but said that these powers never tried to impose their decisions without consultation with the League of Nations. Referring to the collapse of the tripartite naval limitations conference, Sir Austen blamed lack of preparation for its failure. Great Britain, he said, has already sacrificed a great deal for disarmament, both on land and sea.

Protects Belgium.

The British statesman recalled that England had given Belgium a guarantee of protection in 1914, saying that history proved the guarantee had been kept.

"Britain also signed the Locarno pact, but she cannot guarantee all thefrontiers in Europe," continued Sir Austen. "I highly esteem the League of Nations, but I cannot sacrifice the British empire for it."

Sir Austen declared that the league still is weak, but should be allowed to grow in peace and tranquility. When he concluded he was given a rousing ovation.

Earlier in the day Aristide Briand the French foreign minister had addressed the assembly in behalf of disarmament. He said he regretted that France was unable to participate in the tripartite naval limitations conference, but that he felt certain before it opened that it was doomed to failure.

Only League Can Succeed.

"I felt that, in the field of disarmament, only the League of Nations could be successful," said M. Briand. "Nevertheless, the conference served a useful purpose by emphasizing the idea of peace and disarmament among the peoples.

"There will be no decisive victory in the next war. The last war demonstrated that victory and defeat are practically alike."

The foreign minister expressed a strong hope for disarmament, saying he considered it a "sacred work." In conclusion he said that friendship between France and Germany is growing slowly and that eventually all obstacles will be removed.

FRANCE BOOSTING DUTIES ON GOODS MADE IN AMERICA

imposing upon it higher or other charges than may be imposed upon the goods of these countries."

Favors Germany, England.

Germany and England are the greatest gainers by the new tariff schedule, and these two countries, particularly the latter, according to officials here, will fall heir to the American trade if the schedule succeeds in freezing out the Americans. Germany is favored with preferential rates under the commercial treaty which becomes effective September 6. England likewise is favored because of its "most-favored nation" treaty with France, under which the latter country is obliged to give English goods the same preferential rates accorded the goods of other countries.

The United States is now seeking a similar treaty, but thus far France has been reluctant to extend the privilege to this country. Efforts to negotiate a "most-favored nation" treaty have been under way since early in 1923.

Washington Excited.

It was not, however, until the discriminatory character of the new French duties was revealed that Washington became excited over its failure to obtain such an agreement. The schedule was made public only this week and now the state department machinery is operating at full speed in an attempt to seek immediate relief for American shippers pending negotiation of a treaty.

Death of Samuel Allen Brings An End to Romance

ALAMEDA, Cal., Sept. 10—(I. N. S.)—Death of Samuel Allen, 83, wealthy retired rancher, brought to a close today a romance which had culminated last week when Allen and his former housekeeper, Miss Marion McDonald, 63, eloped and were married.

FINGER CUT

Mrs. A. D. Rische, 2335 South Sixteenth street, sustained a painfully cut and bruised finger Saturday evening when an automobile door was slammed on it. She was taken to the Lincoln General hospital where Dr. C. C. Hickman treated the injured member. After receiving medical attention she was taken to her home.

A number of fans have inquired if Rabbitt Moranville would be eligible to play for the Cardinals in the world's series should the St. Louis outfit win the pennant. He will not. He joined the team September 3. Only plays on the team before September 1 are eligible.

Confident Coal Strike Will End As Result Talks

CHICAGO, Sept. 10— UP)—Confidence that the Illinois coal strike will be settled at conferences between miners and operators now in progress here was evident in both camps tonight, although no definite indications of agreement had come from the secret meetings.

Two representatives of the operators and two of the miners were conducting the negotiations, which started Wednesday. They were expected to report back to the rest of the conferees of both sides Monday.

If an agreemnteis reached, it is expected to be used as a model for settling the coal dispute in other states of mid-continent district, where union mines have been idle since the Jacksonville wage agreement expired last April.

PANAMA'S ENVOY CHALLENGES U. S. CLAIM TO CANAL

been settled in our new treaty of 1926, but as Panama has not yet ratified that treaty, having hope of further negotiations, and in view of the United States' attitude we would not be surprised if she eventually were to accept our interpretation. Otherwise we could submit our case to an imperial court of justice."

He detailed the story of Panama's relations with the United States and pointed out that an amicable settlement of all disputes to date had been possible, with the exception of this one.

"A serious difference still remains," he said, "on which no compromise is possible because it can not be settled unless one party or the other abandons its viewpoint. The United States maintains that Panama transferred to her Panama's right of soverignty over the Canal zone, while Panama maintains she granted such rights and authority only for construction and maintenance of the canal."

Preceding the statement by Moralis, Austen Chamberlain, British foreign secretary, gave his versions of reasons that the three-power naval disarmament conference called by President Coolidge had failed.

Lack of preparation and failure on the part of the conferees, representing Great Britain, the United States and Japan, to reach a common ground for agreement in advance had been responsible for the failure, he said, adding that it was not always by hurrying matters that the greatest results were achieved.

"The happiest fact of the tri-partite conference," he said, "is that after all with its difficulties, disputes and divergent interests it could separate without troubling the good relations between all three countries."

FOUR INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

to the pavement, was arrested by Officer Holloway and Lieutenant Rymer after a wild chase down O street.

Officer Holloway who witnessed the accident jumped on the running board of a passing car and chased Smith from Seventeenth to Fifteenth street before stopping him. The officer made a flying leap from one running board to the other.

Smith showed fight and Lieut. Rymer who happened to be at Fourteenth and O streets assisted Officer Holloway in bringing the man to the police station. Rymer, who drove Smith's car to the station was forced to stop at Eleventh and O when Smith refused to be taken to jail. Smith's small son was riding with him at the time.

At the station he was booked for intoxication and driving while intoxicated.

Child Is Injured.

Robert Bruns, two and a half year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Duffie Bruns, 1040 North Tenth street, sustained bruises and cuts about the head, hands and knees when he was knocked to the pavement at Tenth and Charleston streets about 8 o'clock by a car driven by Andrew A. Kalperberger, 1236 Court street.

Kalperberger stopped immediately after his car struck the lad and rushed him to St. Elizabeth's hospital where he was attended by Dr. T. F. McCarthy, who said the lad was not badly hurt.

The car was going south on Tenth street when the lad suddenly darted in front of his machine, so close to the car that he was unable to stop. After his wounds were dressed, the boy was taken to his home by his parents.

Bobbie Love, 4, is at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Love, 2032 L street, with a fractured skull, the result of being knocked to the pavement between Twentieth and Twenty-first on L street by a car driven by James Gunn, 2632 K street, about 6 o'clock.

The boy was rushed to St. Elizabeth's hospital where he was attended by Dr. T. F. McCarthy. His injuries are considered serious.

It is said that the lad ran in front of the car as he was crossing the street.

Thomas, the four year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd J. Stewart, 1520 G street, sustained a badly lacerated ear, which required several stitches to close, and bruises and cuts, when he was hit by a car in front of his home about 6 o'clock. Fred Thompson, 450 Judson street, driver of the car, reported the accident to the police station.

Dr. Harry Taylor who attended the boy, said that his injuries were not serious. He was taken to his home after being treated.

PLAN DEFENSE OF HARRY HILL

at Streator that he was not worried.

"They're trying to work up a lot of maudlin sympathy, that's all," he said. "Hill will be tried right here. Probably he'll face a jury first on charges of forging his mother's name to checks; then he'll be tried for murder. By then there won't be so much uncalled for sympathy because he's admitted the forgery and he'll be a convicted criminal then."

Meanwhile, dispatches from the train that is bringing Hill back, quote him as saying that when the entire country was supposed to be looking for him he was arrested here for a traffic law violation but released when he said he was from out of town and that he then went to Streator, drove past his home and around town before starting the flight to the northwest that ended last Saturday.

WINGS OF DARING AIRMEN CLIPPED BY LOSS OF LIFE

they probably will make a flight eastward over Europe in an attempt to set a new record for endurance or non-stop distance.

World Fliers May Quit.

There is every indication that Edward F. Schlee and William Brock, the round-the-world flyers in the Pride of Detroit, will have to abandon their flight when they reach Tokio.

A Tokio cablegram to International News Service quoted the Tokio representative of the Detroit world-girdlers as saying he was unable to charter a ship to carry the men and their plane across the Pacific and that they would probably be compelled to give up the flight after reaching Japan. The original plan to fly over the Pacific with a stop at Midway islands was cancelled when it was found there was no suitable landing place in the Midway group.

Owing to the action of the navy department in cancelling the leaves of absence of Lieut. Lawrence W. Curtin and Ensign Stephen B. Edwards, it is likely that Rene Foncke, the French ace, will have to abandon his attempt to make a non-stop flight from New York to Paris in a Sikorsky plane. Curtin and Edwards were to have acted as navigator and radio operator, respectively, for Foncke.

Miss Elder May Go.

Miss Ruth Elder of Detroit, who flew from Detroit to Tampa, Fla., yesterday on the first leg of a flight to Paris, via the Atlantic, may hop off in the face of all dangers and warnings, but it looks like a safe bet that the trans-Atlantic part of the flight will not be attempted.

Miss Elder made the jump to Tampa in a monoplane — "The American Girl"—piloted by George Haldeman. She plans to fly from Tampa to Wheeling, W. Va., tomorrow and from Wheeling to Roosevelt Field, Long Island, Monday. The hop-off at Roosevelt Field on the last section of the trip is problematical.

Three French Groups.

There is a little group of three sets of French airmen at Paris who claim they will attempt a trans-Atlantic flight westward within the next week or so if there is any possible way of doing it. They are Leon Givon and Pierre Corbu, pilots of the Farman Bluebird, Paul Tarascon, pilot of the monoplane Yellow Bird, and Dieudonne Costes, pilot of the Breguet plane "Nungesser and Coli."

Corbu was quoted in a Paris cablegram as saying he and Givon were determined to hop off if they were assured of forty-eight hours of flying weather, even as late as October. However, indications are that the gods of the weather will be found to hold the winning hand.

Era at An End.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10—(I. N. S.)—The stirring era of aerial romance which dawned in the midnight black of Le Bourget when Lindberg swooped down into the calcium flares from New York is now at an end.

Practical men the world around have cried aloud against daring, against romance, against fearless spirits, and the practical men are to have their way.

The United States, which started it all through Lindberg, Chamberlin, Byrd, Maitland and Hegenberger, is today in the front rank of the procession back to moderation in aviation. Brock and Schlee, hall way around the world, in their Pride of Detroit, are expected to abandon their enterprise at Tokio. Rene Foncke's long contemplated trans-Atlantic flight is on the rocks because of the withdrawal by naval authorities of permission for Lieut. L. W. Curtin and Ensign S. V. Edwards to participate. Philadelphia and Boston interests have withdrawn prizes for trans-Atlantic flights to those cities. Levins has been warned by British aviation authorities not to attempt a flight to America and has virtually given up the idea. The Windsor-to-Windsor flight is off and Captain Courtney's frustrated flight from England to New York is abandoned by official ukase.

Ederle O'kays Decision.

Meanwhile, as the airmen swing the noses of their craft toward the home hangers, Admiral E. D. Ederle, chief of naval operations gives official approval to the decision.

"It is strongly recommended that steps be taken which will prevent the recurrence of long distance flights over water in land planes. Flights of this nature, even when undertaken by army and navy must ultimately end in disaster."

The words are from the report of Lieut. Ben H. Wyatt, the navy's member of the joint committee which inspected the machines entered in the San Francisco to Honolulu Dole flight.

Unconfirmed reports in navy circles which suggest that permission to Commander Richard Byrd to undertake his projected South Pole expedition may be withdrawn are neither confirmed nor denied in official quarters. Secretary Wilbur has stated that while he disliked to see Byrd risk his life in the enterprise, he would not force him to withdraw. Possibly that this attitude may be reversed by the fate of recent flights was seen in a sentence in the Wyatt report which said:

Of No Real Benefit.

"It is not my belief that any scientific value can be derived from such flights."

Wyatt's entire report was characterized by Admiral Ederle as "excellent and sound." Secretary Wilbur has been away from Washington for several weeks. Navy circles regard it as well within the range of possibilities that the matter of Byrd's plans will be placed before him when he returns.

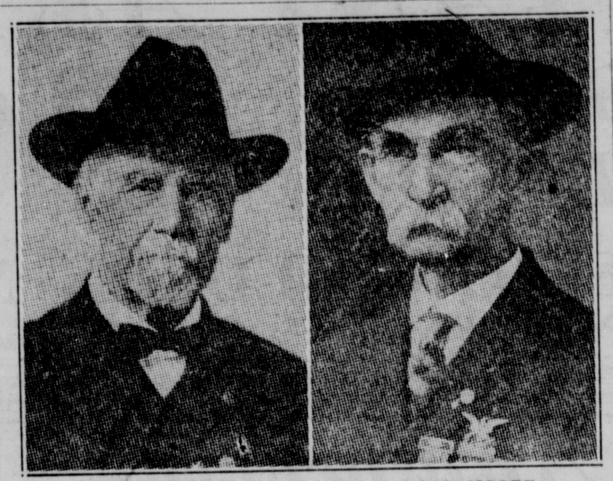

When Lindbergh came home in May he told officials here that trans-oceanic flights were ten years away. When Maitland and Hegenberger returned from Honolulu they said the world must not expect too much.

"Since Lindbergh," Maitland said "many aviators imagine that you have only to jump into a plane and it will take you there. It will take perhaps a year for the world to get over that idea."

It took less than six months.

Girl Inmate of Illinois State School Is United With Mother Who Thought She Died As Baby

LINCOLN, Ill., Sept. 10— INS)—Behind the grim walls of the Lincoln state school and colony here a miracle, it would seem, has been worked out in order that one of those happy endings so beloved of fictionists might be written into the life story of pretty, golden-haired Josephine Dorothy Noble Gardner.

As a result the 18-year-old girl soon will be speeding to California and a life of ease and plenty with the mother from whose arms she was torn almost at the very moment of birth and who never knew until recently that her child had lived.

The story begins nineteen years ago when Winifred Noble, daughter of a farmer and still in her 'teens, eloped from her home near McLean, Ill., to wed Joseph Gardner. Within a few months he had died and the grief-stricken little widow was in St. Joseph's hospital at Bloomington. There her baby was born and when her hour of travail ended she asked for it, the nurse had but one answer: "Ask your father."

Mrs. Gardner did ask him and Farmer Noble—stern, unrelenting toward the girl who had defied his wishes by marrying — told her bruskly that the baby had died. In that, however, he deceived her, for he had taken the child away and given her into the care of a family in Williamson county, paying them well to take her and saying only that he never wanted to see or hear of her again.

Shortly afterward he sold his farm and moved with his family to Montana, where he died some years ago with his lips still sealed about the terrible thing he had done.

Peculiarly enough, for all that he had robbed her of her name—Josephine, in memory of the father who did not live to see her; Dorothy, after her grandmother; Noble, after her mother's family, and Gardner, her rightful family name.

So by these four names the baby grew to be 6 years old with the family in Williamson county; then, too poor to keep her any longer, they turned her over to the courts as an orphan. Then a probation officer took her but eventually sent her to an orphanage and from there arranged to have her sent to the home here as a state ward, although Josephine was far from being feeble minded like those who were her daily companions and playmates.

So she passed through childhood, girlhood and young womanhood and the time was drawing near when, being of age, she must prepare to go out into the world and make her own way.

To the lot of Mrs. Sarah V. Cosby, social worker at the school, fell the duty of paving the way and finding her a place.

Upon the papers given Mrs. Cosby read the name—Josephine Dorothy Noble Gardner—and it stirred memory of days long past when, herself a resident of McLean, she had known the Nobles and heard the sad story of little Winifred Noble ,who had been married and widowed and given birth to a baby all within a brief year and had lost that baby right after its birth in the Bloomington hospital.

"Now, I wonder if this is any more than a co-incidence," she mused to herself and, enlisting the aid of another social worker—Mrs. Jean Comerford, of Chicago—started in to trace back the tangled history of the supposed orphan.

To McLean, to Bloomington, to Kenny, to Clinton—wherever the next clue pointed—the two social workers made their way, asking questions, inspecting records, checking against the known facts.

In the end they came to a happy certainty and so a letter went to Mrs. Winifred Herzog, wife of Theodore Herzog, manager of a fashionable Long Beach, Calif., ballroom, telling her that the little daughter she had believed dead not only was alive but was a charming young woman as well.

Girl Gets First Letter.

Back came the answer as fast as a telegraph wire could bring it:

"I have been in a trance since getting your letter. I am coming at once, if it is true. I want to be the first of my family to see her. Is it really true that you have my daughter? Don't tell me there has been a dreadful mistake."

By wire, too, she was reassured. Dr. C. H. Diehl, managing officer of the school, and Dr. Roy Yde, state director of public welfare, told her there was no mistake. The proofs were unshakeable and a picture of the girl was being sent her.

Then came that wonderful day when for the first time in her life, Josephine, in her gingham dress and with severely parted hair, as is customary with inmates of a state institution, got the first letter of all her life.

Hard on the heels of the letter, in person, is coming that wonderful being "mother," and—

But that is the end of the story, except that, of course, they are all going to live happily ever afterward.

For the first time this year, the razz berry was heard at the Cubs park on September 4, when dumb base-running let St. Louis turn the triple play. Just a moment before, hundreds of fans had hurled straw hats upon the field when the Cubs started what looked like a winning rally.

FLAGS FLY AS LEGION LEAVES

NEW YORK, Sept. 10—(U. P.)—With gay peace time bunting and merry flags in place of her war-day camouflage of sombre daubings, the liner Leviathan sailed today with 1,610 legionnaires bound for the convention in Paris.

The vessel which carried the last contingent of American delegates through a line of shrieking whistles of harbor craft was escorted by the naval dirigible Los Angeles. A squadron of airplanes, the semi-rigid airship J-3 and destroyers revived the color of the days when the vessel was a champion army transport.

General John J. Pershing boarded the Leviathan ten minutes before she sailed, was greeted by Vice President Charles Dawes, and received an ovation which lasted for fully five minutes.

Eighteenth Ship.

The Leviathan, one of the twenty-seven ships carrying delegates to Paris, was the eighteenth sailing from New York harbor.

Stirring trench ballads and marching tunes reverberated through the vessel as the excited ex-soldiers crowded around a dozen bands and sang the songs which the war made famous.

"Hinky dink'ey parleyvous," "There's a Long, Long Trail a-Winding," "Over There," and others were heard as tugs backed the vessel out of her dock into the North river.

Vice President Dawes, who visited the dock before the liner sailed, smoked furiously on his underslung pipe and expressed regret that he could not accompany the dough boys on their pilgrimage.

Signs forbid smoking and Dawes violated every regulation during the half hour he remained at the pier.

Dawes Wanted to Go.

"I'd like to go, not as vice president," said Dawes, as he greeted Pershing, "but a. w. o. l. as a soldier."

U. S. DRY CZAR PUT ON GRILL

Lowman's Talk Not to Liking of Mellon and Told to Stop.

Charges Entire Federal Prohib Army Honeycombed With Graft.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10—(United Press.)—Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Seymour Lowman was placed under "censorship" by his superiors tonight.

The "dry czar" has made several statements which officials describe as indiscreet, so henceforth his speeches and press statements will be scrutinized by higher treasury officials before they are made public.

Authorities indicated that Lowman was virtually "talking himself out of his job." While leaders were trying to keep prohibition out of the limelight and carry on enforcement work without great publicity, Lowman issued a blasting statement charging the entire federal dry army was honeycombed with graft and corruption and that it would take fifty years to make prohibition effective.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has called Lowman on the grill. Under-Secretary Mills has also conferred with Lowman on the "free speech" subject.

Meantime, Lowman is sticking to his guns, contending he has stated nothing but the truth, but refusing to elaborate on the subject.

Political reaction to the Lowman statement has been tremendous. Many letters and telegrams have been received at the treasury department the past twenty-four hours.

Are Not Helpful.

Some administration leaders indicated Lowman's assertions at this time were not viewed as helpful with a presidential year in the offing.

It was also held by some that the assistant secretary's speech at Buffalo, N. Y., attacking the state legislature and Governor Al Smith's attitude toward the 18th amendment was untimely, as it would stir up antagonism in the state.

For political reasons, it has been deemed advisable to keep prohibition in the background.

A demand that Lowman "name the grafters, not merely fire them," was made tonight by President Charles Capehart of the Association Against Impure Liquor.

F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, issued a statement approving Lowman's plan to rid the dry service of crooks, adding that if "sincere believers" in the dry cause had been appointed originally the present house cleaning would be unnecessary.

W. H. Stayton, chairman of the association against prohibition, said Lowman, foreseeing failure in his work, is preparing an "alibi in advance."

Must Use Discretion.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10—(International News Service)—Alarmed by the political turmoil stirred up by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Seymour Lowman over his attack on Governor Al Smith of New York and his frank statement that the dry service is reeking with corruption, the treasury today took steps to gag the man hired to promote unsensational, quiet, and businesslike prohibition enforcement.

Unless Lowman uses more discretion in his statements to the press and in public speeches, it was intimated at the treasury that he would not be retained as head of the government's dry army and navy through the coming campaign.

President Coolidge is expected to take up the question of sensational prohibition statements with Mellon next week. The administration retired General Lincoln C. Andrews as dry chief to de-sensationalize enforcement. Lowman, Andrews' cousin, however, has put it on the front pages again.

Wet Ammunition.

Officials said that Lowman's statement to the effect that if complete enforcement is accomplished in fifty years a good job will have been done, and that bribery is rampant in the service, has furnished great ammunition for the wets, who already are marshalling their forces for an attack against the dry laws when congress meets.

Lowman's frank admissions virtually throw the entire prohibition service open to assault, courts a congressional investigation and makes certain that it will become an even more important issue in the campaign than had been anticipated.

Lowman holds a recess appointment. He will be up for confirmation in the senate in December.

About forty agents and subordinates so far have been dropped from the dry service for corruption. Lowman said that charges had been preferred against no administrators and that while some are inefficient none is suspected of corruption.

The treasury has the power to "hire and fire" agents and officials until civil service becomes effective October 1.

COOLIDGE IS GIVEN DEGREE

Made Doctor of Science During Stop at Brookings, So. Dak.

Urges Dedication Crowd Take Abraham Lincoln as Model.

ABOARD PRESIDENT COOLIDGE SPECIAL ENROUTE TO WASHINGTON, Sept. 10—(United Press)—President Coolidge, headed home after his long vacation in the west, stepped off at Brookings, S. D., today and before 10,000 grain farmers and their families dedicated a library at the South Dakota agricultural school. He received the doctor of science degree and then his party resumed their eastward journy, heading across Minnesota and into Wisconsin, during the afternoon.

The train will reach Chicago during the night and make a brief stop in the railroad yards. It is scheduled to arrive at Washington Sunday night.

The president in his speech at Brookings told the crowd, the largest he has addressed since he reached the west, and the most undemonstrative, that it should take as a model Abraham Lincoln.

Dedicate College Library.

Sun-tanned farmers, gingham-clad women with crying babies and students of the school were in the audience. Religion and education was the text of the address which dedicated the new Lincoln libary.

Mr. Coolidge did not mention relief legislation as many newspapers hereabouts had editorially hoped he would. He built his speech around Lincoln's zeal for pure living, and recommended that colleges teach spiritual as well as scientific truths to the youth of the land to save them from despair.

"Religion and education must go hand in hand or colleges fail," the president said.

"The human soul will always rebel," he continued, "at any attempt to confine it to the physical world. Its dwelling place is in the intellectual and moral world. It is into that realm that all true education should lead.

Must Inspire Students.

"Our college will fail in their duty to their students unless they are able to inspire them with a broader understanding of the spiritual meaning of science or literature.

"There is something more in learning than a mere knowledge of science, a mere acquisition of wealth, a mere striving for places and power.

"I cannot conceive that the object of Abraham Lincoln was merely to instruct men how to raise corn to feed more hogs to get more money to buy more land and so on in the expanding circle as the story goes?" He referred to Lincoln's signing of a bill providing for government land grants to agricultural colleges.

"Of course he wanted to teach men to raise more corn, but his main object must have been to raise better men,' the president said.

Crowd Undemonstrative.

The crowd of farmers which heard the president was undemonstrative listening intently without any display of emotion. Not once was the president's speech broken by a cheer, as were his speeches at the other end of the state during his vacation.

After the address Mr. Coolidge received from Dr. C. W. Pugsley, president of the college, the degree of doctor of science.

There was no formality about the ceremony. Dr. Pubsley merely made the announcement to the crowd and handed a slip of paper, symbolic of the degree, to the president.

Then the chief executive walked from the temporary bandstand at the corner of the library and laid the cornerstone of Coolidge Sylvan theater in the same corner of the green campus.

Mrs. Coolidge Wields Trowel.

Mrs. Coolidge also wielded the trowel during the brief ceremony. She started at one end and he at the other end of the stone. As they began "work," Mrs. Coolidge announced she was "going to do a better job of it than he did."

Mrs. Coolidge finished before the president.

The stop at Brookings occupied only about an hour and a half.

All the way across Minnesota, the train slowed up at small towns and stopped at the larger ones to permit the inhabitants to see the president.

At each town, Mr. Coolidge went to the rear platform and waved to the townsmen and farmers assembled to see him.

The train arrived at Winona, Minn., at 6:10 p. m., just on schedule.

A special dust settling device, a sprinkler attached to the engine, made the trip more pleasant.

Much Work Ahead.

ABOARD THE PRESIDENTIAL SPECIAL EN ROUTE TO WASHINGTON, Sept. 10—(International News Service)—President Coolidge was moving eastward tonight from his ninety-day vacation in the Black Hills, his valedictory address to the people of South Dakota duly delivered at Brookings, S. D., where the state agricultural college is located.

Ahead of him in Washington lies a winter of hard work. Immediately upon arrival the executive plans to confer with a number of leading senators to determine whether the senate should be called into session a month earlier to dispose of the election contests involving William S. Vare of Pennsylvania, and Frank Smith of Illinois. Already he has discussed the proposition with Senator Jones, republican, of Washington, who is advocating the early assembly on the ground that the Vare and Smith cases should be gotten out of the way so that nothing will impede Mississippi flood relief when the full congress convenes in December.

Successor To Wood.

Also, Mr. Coolidge must select a successor to the late Gen. Leonard Wood as governor general of the Philippines and decide on a man to take over the work of Ambassador Sheffield at Mexico City.

In addition to these immediate tasks, the president expects to start work on his annual message to congress. Particular interest will attach to his views on farm relief in view of his stay this summer in the heart of the region that has demanded federal aid for agriculture so insistently.

There was some disappointment today that Mr. Coolidge ignored the farm problem in his speech at Brookings. A number of the South Dakota newspapers, mindful of the fact that the address was to be delivered at the agricultural college, editorially had asked the president to define his position inasmuch as he had vetoed the McNary-Haugen bill.

Discusses Education Instead

Instead, however, the president confined himself to a discussion of the need for maintaining American institutions of learning on a high spiritual plane.

The speech was in dedication of the Lincoln Memorial library erected to honorthe great president who brought land-grant colleges into existence. Following the ceremonies at the library President and Mrs. Coolidge laid a memorial stone in the wall of the "Coolidge Sylvan theater," which the college is building.

RIVAL PICTURE MAKERS BATTLE

Trouble Follows Two Producers Claiming the Same Location.

CEDAR CITY, Utah, Sept. 10—(UP)—Two men were arrested tonight by City Marshall Grant Walter in connection with the battle between rival Hollywood film companies for location sites.

Louis Jerome, business manager of the Edwin Carewe company and Cal Paul, production manager of the Albert Rogell troup, engaged in an altercation in the lobby of the El Escalante hotel and were arrested.

The men later were releasd on bonds signd by Edwin Carewe, heading a company here filming "Ramona" and Rogell, heading the rival company shooting "The Shepherd of the Hills."

A near fist fight last night between Carewe and Rogell has brought members of both companies all quartered here in the same hotel into conflict.

At Inspiration Point, a film "location" in southern Utah, Rogell has fifteen armed men and a sheriff's force of twelve armed men headed by Sheriff J. T. Leigh of Iron county. Sheriff Leigh contends that the Rogell company is entitled to the location. Carewe threatened to march on Inspiration Point Sunday and begin work on his picture.

Defiant, Rogell declared he would not permit Carewe to get on the location.

Both highways leading to the site were being guarded.

ALLOWS WARDEN'S MILEAGE CLAIM

Warden W. T. Fenton of the penitentiary has received a warrant for $50 issued by the state auditor as an allowance for the use of his own automobile on state business during the mnoth of August. When the claim first came in it was rejected, Auditor Johnson taking the position that such claims should be itemized to show the time, places, and mileage of each trip taken. Mr. Fenton explained that he was away part of the month and could not furnish such data, but would be glad to do so in future. On that understanding the warrant was permittde to go through.

The automobile was used during Fenton's absence by penitentiary subordinates in making trips to and from Lincoln. This is done regularly, and it has been the custom to charge $50 per month for the use of the machine. The warden thinks the bill will be larger if all trips are charged for at 8 cents per mile, but he is willing to do it that way if the auditor insists.

TRANSFER FIRM SUED FOR $5,650

Two damage suits aggregating $5,650 were filed Saturday in District court against the Sullivan Transfer Co., as the result of an auto accident July 31 on the S. Y. A. highway.

Mary E. Walker was riding in an auto driven by James Wynkoop at 9:30 o'clock that night, she says, when the car hit a Sullivan truck parked at the roadside. She asks $5,250 for injuries sustained. Wynkoop also is named as a defendant in her action.

Wynkoop sues the company for $400 damages done to his car.

NOVEL FEATURE AT BUTLER FAIR

Theatrical Performances To Be Given Front Of Grandstand.

(Special to The Star.)

DAVID CITY, Neb., Sept. 10—A novel form of entertainment, so far as county fair evening programs are concerned, will be offered to the people who attend the Butler county fair this year, September 20 to 23.

Several years ago the presentation of musical revues before the grandstand was initiated in the state by the management of the Butler county fair. This feature proved so popular that it has become one of the leading attractions on the evening programs of a large number of county fairs throughout the state.

This year the management has contracted with the Chick Boyes Players to stage a series of comedies and dramas before the grandstand. An especially built movable stage has been obtained and will be placed on the race track directly in front of the grand stand each evening. A public address system will be installed to enable the audience in all parts of the grandstand to hear the voices of the actors. Those installing the public address system have expressed confidence that the acoustics will be equal to those of the average auditorium.

This new eventing entertainment feature is attracting the attention of county fair managers in the eastern part of the state, and many are expected to visit the Butler county fair for the purpose of noting the success of the experiment. The Chick Boyes players have already established a reputation in eastern Nebraska, having appeared in a number of towns during the summer.

Aside from the free acts which will be staged before the grandstand during the afternoon automobile and horse racing programs, there will be a considerably larger array of exhibits than in previous years, if advance reservations may be considered as an indication of the final turnout.

Several county bands have been engaged to provide music for the three days, and the advance space reservations indicate a large and attractive midway.

The officers of the fair association are Charles Lemley, president; W. H. McGaffin, secretary; J. J. Meyesenburg, vice-president; and J. J. Bastar, treasurer.

The department superintendents this year are: George F. Hahn, Octavia, horses; J. J. Meysenburg, Bellwood, cattle; Oscar Talbot, David City, swine and sheep; Charles McCracken, David City, poultry; F. C. Polak, David City, agriculture; Mrs. W. H. McGaffin, David City, kitchen; Mrs. Oscar Talbot, David City, domestic arts; Mrs. Ferne Wanser Neill, David City, schools.

LAVINDER TRIAL BEGINS MONDAY

State to Demand Death Penalty in Falls City Case.

Defendant Accused of Fatal Shooting in Big Holdup.

(Special to The Star)

FALLS CITY, Neb., Sept. 10—The death sentence will be demanded for Clarence Lavinder when he goes on trial here for the murder of Buff Rasnick, 15, Forest City, Mo., County Attorney R. C. James has announced.

The county attorney will be aided in the prosecution of the case by C. E. Matson, former county attorney of Lancaster county.

The case was the outgrowth of the holdup of a gigantic crap game on the outskirts of Falls City, in which more than 75 men of this vicinity were engaged. Three men swooped down on the game, held the players at bay with revolvers and aided by two men who had already been stationed at the game, robbed the players of approximately $3,000.

During the raid, which occurred on June 6, 1926, one of the men being held up attempted to bolt. As he did so, a bandit trained a .45 calibre revolver on him and began firing, the first bullet striking Rasnick, who was standing nearby, his hands in the air. Following an operation the youth died.

Immediately after the entire crowd had been frisked, the quintet, all of whom were unmasked, leaped into their own car and sped away.

They were traced to Whiting, Kas., and thence to Leavenworth, Kas., but always managed to keep ahead of Sheriff Albert Young and his posse.

Arrest Is Made.

After the chase had proved unsuccessful, descriptions of the five as near as could be gatherede, were distributed over the entire United States. The case came into the limelight again in May, this year, when word from authorities at Roanoke, W. Va., revealed that a man was under arrest who resembled a man wanted in Richardson county.

Deputy Sheriff Lewis Davies was immediately dispatched to Roanoke, returning shortly with Lavinder. On the first anniversary of the crime Sheriff William C. Condit interviewed Lavinder, but the arrested man remained mute.

Lavinder will be defended by John Mullen, who has made two attempts to have the charges dismissed. District Judge J. B. Raper, who will sit in the case, overruled both the defendant's plea in abatement and motion to quash.

Goes On Trial.

CLARENCE LAVINDER.

Pigskin Kickers Soon Busy In Nebraska Camp

Huskers Step Out On Grid This Week

Nebraska Squad Booked to Cut Loose Thursday In Its Opening Workout; Ames Here In First Game.

BY GREGG McBRIDE.

Football, the king of all intercollegiate sports, will be ushered into the coronation room and seated on the throne this week when university, college and high schools turn their attention to the pigskin sport.

The official date for the opening of the grid season in the Missouri Valley conference is Thursday, Sept. 15, and the University of Nebraska athletic department is busy preparing for the issuing of equipment and staging of the first practice at that time. A majority of the Nebraska high schools and members of the Nebraska college conference have been hard at the training grind for a week.

Beargmen Ready to Go.

Coach Ernest E. Bearg and his aides at the University of Nebraska plan to lose no time in getting ready for the opening game of the 1927 season, the Oct. 1 tussle with Iowa State college at the Memorial stadium.

Before his departure for the Saturday rules meeting at Kansas City, the Cornhusker mentor indicated that the Thursday program would be a double-barreled affair, equipment being issued in the morning and the afternoon schedule calling for the first workout in which every candidate would be expected to participate.

String of Husker Vets.

Pre-season prospects for the Cornhusker varsity would appear rather bright, with 22 letter men and a bunch of likely looking sophomores bidding for places on the team. A squad of 60 or 70 is expected to greet the Cornhusker coaching staff Thursday.

Reports reaching the university athletic department carry the story that the varsity candidates have been in serious training this summer, with most of the eligibles hard at tasks calculated to build strength and endurance.

Rhodes to Tutor Yearlings.

Freshman Coach "Choppy" Rhodes probably will issue the call for first-year candidates Monday, Sept. 19. A busy program is being prepared for the yearlings, limitation of the spring practice period calling for more stress on the first year workouts.

Football prospects are "looking up" over the Nebraska college circuit this season. Return of a good-sized bunch of veteran material in most camps has been strengthened by the addition of a number of high school stars who will be serving their first year in a college grid campaign.

Wesleyan to Play "Frosh."

Abandonment of the freshman rule at Nebraska Wesleyan will add strength to the Methodist threat. Chadron Normal, Midland college, Peru Normal and Doane college are other favorites, along with the Cotner Bulldogs. The Cotner squad will be enjoying a re-vamped athletic plant. Dana college will be in the field this fall with its first football team.

High school football apparently is set for a big season. Omaha and Lincoln teams are back with strong lineups, while Crete and Lexington appear among the strong out-state contenders. The high school dope sheet, however, can be determined only as the season wears along.

TWIN GAMES TODAY.

Links and Reds will round out the 1927 season today by locking horns in a doubleheader. First game at two. Dick Breen requested last night announcement be made that both games will be as hotly contested as if the race were just getting under way.

"The Sunday game's will be played right up to the ha cle," said Dick. "The final pay-off comes Monday and that puts me in position to know that the boys will be out there Sunday hustling their best.

"I appreciate that the fans have borne with me this year and I am planning to tie up with a responsible major league club this fall, coming back in the spring with a ball club that will not call for any apologizing. I'll have a chance to organize this winter and I expect to be up there in 1928."

Tunney Flashes Speed In Training Camp Workouts

LAKE VILLA, Ill., Sept. 10—Gene Tunney broke his rest period here this afternoon by resuming his workouts, boxing six rounds with his sparring partners after three preliminay rounds with the light punching bag.

Although the cut over the champion's right eye has practically entirely healed—the cut that forced him to discontinue his sparring exhibitions for the past three days—his partners were warned to "punch for the body."

The champion is taking every precaution to completely efface the gash so that a blow from Jack Dempsey early in the coming fight will not blind him.

Shows Speed of Lightweight.

The rest evidently benefitted Tunney in more ways than one. He put plenty of enthusiasm in his work and drew a running fire of comment on his speed, as he flashed in and out of his opponent's defense like a lightweight.

The champion is well satisfied with his condition and announced after the workout that his training period is practically over. He will work out tomorrow and then lay off Monday and probably Tuesday. He may work only twice next week.

All boxing will cease September 19, the champion said, so he may have three days of complete rest before the fight on September 22.

Cubs Hit Behind Bush To Even Up Series With 2-1 Win.

Hartnett's Double Factor In Victory; Crowd Of 30,000.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10—The Pitching of Guy Bush was backed by timely hitting and air tight fielding by his Chicago mates and the Cubs evened the series with the New York Giants here this afternoon in a tight 2 to 1 decision.

Bush allowed only six hits. The Giants' only score came in the first inning when doubles by Lindstrom and Roush scored the former. The Cubs evened accounts in the fourth when Grimm singled and scored on Hartnett's double. Singles by English, Heathcote and Stephenson in the fifth put across the winning run. Thirty thousand saw the game. The score:

Baseball or Golf?
Legion Gets Behind.
Fixing the Fighters.
Fighting the Fixers.

Directing heads of baseball, both of the professional and amateur brand, are cultivating an attack of nerves over the apparent decadence of the American sport that long ago was styled the "national game." A nationwide survey of the situation has disclosed that the boys of the cities and larger towns are forsaking the diamond game and taking to caddying on the golf links, where the opportunity is provided to earn considerable money.

The golfing fraternity, with excellent reason, approves this phase of the caddy situation, as the earning power of the average caddy is sufficient to pay his clothing bill and, in many cases, gives the boy his chance to form the saving habit.

The professional baseball magnate, very naturally, views the situation with alarm, as the decadence of the game threatens a scarcity of playing material.

The heads of the amateur organizations have the broader view. They deplore for a more wholesome reason, arguing that baseball is a democratizing sport in which the sons of the rich and the poor get together on the back lots and thereby build a broad Americanism which recognizes no class distinction.

The American Legion, the A. A. U., the National Collegiate association and similar organizations are manifesting a deep interest in the baseball situation and plans are in the making to "save the national game."

Nevertheless, it is apparent that the growth of golf will continue to make inroads on the diamond sport, transferring at least many of the boys from the back lots to the links, and if baseball is to be saved, the saving movement must spring from the small towns and the rural regions not invaded by golf. Golf's appeal, in the main, is to the urban resident, whereas baseball is meat and drink to the boy of the wide open spaces in the country.

Determination of the American Legion to spread the baseball gospel is the most hopeful phase of the situation. Legion heads have committed themselves to a policy of preserving the game for American boys and when any national organization of four million members puts its collective shoulder to the wheel, the resultant push should get substantial results.

Rumors, hints and hunches that the knuckle carnival in Chicago late this month is "in the bag"—meaning that the manipulators of Mr. Rickard's three million dollar extravaganza have stacked the cards and otherwise arranged a sure winner—are calculated to command attention.

Significant, indeed, is the statement published in the Windy City that "Nick the Greek," a national character in betting circles, has placed $200,000 on the line in backing one of the fighting gents and given notice that he will be ready to wager even a larger amount prior to September 22.

In support of the allegation that the purchasers of $40 ringside seats are destined to witness a "framed" fight, comes a Chicago newspaper investigator, one Frank O. Klein, who boldly charges that Mr. Rickard's entertainment actually is "fixed," and he proposes during the next week to proclaim in cold type just which one of the fighters—Tunney or Dempsey—is to have his paw hoisted by the referee as winner.

Fight followers generally will readily recall the "frame" flareup which followed the event of last fall in Philly. It was a foregone conclusion that the directing heads and principals in that particular epi-

Pittsburgh Looks Good In Scoring Second Win Over Phils.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 10—Playing baseball of championship caliber for the first time since their return home more than a week ago, the Pirates took the second consecutive game from the Phillies today by a 4 to 0 score.

Ray Kremer pitched masterful ball, but was aided over several rough spots by snappy fielding, especially by Grantham, Traynor and Paul Waner. Spalding cut off an additional Pirate run by a spectacular one-handed catch of Harris' fly near the fence.

Ulrich pitched good ball for the losers, but while given only one error, his support was poor. The score:

Plans Reorganize Nebraska Circuit

Lincoln Man Fares Forth This Week On Tour Designed Revive the Diamond Sport In State Ball League.

BY "CY" SHERMAN.

Reorganization of the Nebraska State baseball league, defunct since Lincoln dropped its membership following the pennant campaign of 1923, is forecast by the filing of articles of incorporation Saturday at the office of the secretary of state in Lincoln. The filing specifies James E. Beltzer and George R. Mann, the latter a Lincoln attorney, as the incorporators and the articles provide for the oganization of a stock company to provide the necessary financial backing to put the league wheels in motion.

Goes On Road This Week.

Mr. Beltzer announced Saturday that the new plan of organization is patterned in the main after the scheme he launched two years ago, when the failure of Hastings to join the fold balked the proposed reorganization of the Nebraska loop. Mr. Beltzer, who offers to serve the league as president, treasurer and secretary without salary unless the venture earns a profit, said he would go to Norfolk and Grand Island this week to make his start in lining up a circuit of not less than six clubs.

Urging Reorganization.

"Norfolk and Grand Island have been pressing for league reorganization," Mr. Beltzer said, "and I feel sure that prominent businessmen fans in those two cities readily will pledge the stock subscriptions required to insure membership in the league.

"I am equally confident that York and Columbus also will wheel into line, while Beatrice, Fairbury, Kearney, Hastings, North Platte and other live Nebraska cities will be given an opportunity to join the fold.

Interstate Circuit.

"The articles will make it possible to organize an interstate league, so Concordia, Kas., and Sioux Falls, S. D., also will be given serious consideration.

"The Nebraska league, in case it reorganizes, will be different from

CUP ON JOURNEY; FRENCHMEN WIN

Tilden and Johnston Bow To Foreign Pair In Singles Duels.

Youth Triumphant Over Age In Last Round of Trophy Series.

By DAVIS J. WALSH.

GERMANTOWN CRICKET CLUB, Philadelphia, Sept. 10—The harvest season is no more. The great drought is on. France has won the Davis cup, that wide, flowing bottle of cheer that had become almost an American institution.

Back in 1919 we won it from Australia and since then we had held it because William T. Tilden and William Johnston were the greatest tennis players in the world and they happened to be Americans, born and bred.

They still are Americans in every sense of the nationality that sponsors sportsmanship and fighting heart, but no longer are they the world's greatest tennis players.

Odd Match to France.

That was proved most conclusively this afternoon when they went into the final matches needing only one victory in two starts and didn't get it. Tilden was beaten by his arch nemesis, Rene La Costee, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2. Johnston lost to Henri Cochet, 6-4, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4, in the match that made the cup's departure definite and most official.

It staked France to the odd victory in the five sets, America having won one singles match and the doubles, while rFance took the three remaining singles.

Gallant In Defeat.

Of course, the passing of Tilden and Johnston was one of life's inevitables and possibly it might just as well have been this year as the next. Yet it was stark tragedy to see two great figures like Tilden and Johnston lose. The writer's tired, old eyes were a little brighter for the spectacle and it seemed to him that the American pair were even more gallant in defeat than they ever had been in their countless victories.

Coming Into Full Bloom.

Age had withered and custom had staled their infinite variety and the melancholy aspect of the thing was that America has no man worthy of replacing either of them. They couldn't replace the Mona Lisa, you know, when some bold soul cut it out of its frame that time.

France has our cup and with the youth of its team just coming to full bloom it will probably hold the

Yankees Conquer British In Thrilling Polo Clash

BY JAMES L. KILGALLEN.

MEADOWBROOK CLUB, Westbury, L. I., Sept. 10—With amazing ease, America's hard-riding polo team this afternoon overwhelmed Great Britain, 13 to 3, in one of the worst beatings ever administered a team in international competition.

At no stage of the match were the British able to cope with the American stars, particularly the spectacular Tommy Hitchcock, jr., and the hard-riding Devereaux Milburne, regarded by experts as the two greatest polo players of the world. It will now be necessary for the Americans to win only one more game to retain the international challenge cup.

Hitchcock Sets Uace.

The 7-year-old Hitchcock and the 47-year-old Milburn rode the British into the ground. Hitchcock swept the British off their feet in the very first chukker and in less than a minute's play clipped the ball between the blue and white goal posts in the first score.

A few seconds later Malcolm Stevenson's whistling mallet scored another tally and the British rout was started.

As the game progressed, Hitchcock, who has been ill from the effects of having been gassed in the war, began to weaken somewhat, but Milburn rose to the heights of which he is capable and the British hadn't a chance.

British Followers Dazed.

The followers ofthe highly touted British team, which was recruited from the British army-in-India, were astounded at the inability of the invaders to hold the fast pace set by the Americans.

A colorful throng of 35,000, including notables from all parts of the world, viewed the spectacle. In the crowd were the elite of society, luminaries of the sports world, dignitaries of the church and state, stage and screen stars and a goodly representation of the proletariat. The Vanderbilts were there and so were the Harrimans, the Morgans and the Astors.

Hindu Ruler Present.

Color was lent to the vivid scene by the presence of fashionably attired women, army and navy officers in dress uniforms and the dark skinned, turbaned maharajah of Ratland and his flock of Hindu followers. A number of lords of Great Britain also appeared in the boxes.

The field, groomed like a putting green, was in excellent condition.

Western League.

Langford Sticks On Top.

Heavy hitting by a half dozen contenders for batting honors in the Western league was the rule during the last week, but Outfielder Langford of the Des Moines club held his place at the top by going at better than a .400 pace and leads with a mark of .408, one point above his average of a week ago. In six games he was at bat 26 times and made 11 hits.

Outfielder Casey of Tulsa who was out for nearly three months because of injury but now has returned is second with .400 a drop of five points. He played four games and made four hits in 12 times up.

Comorosky's Fine Finish.

Comorosky had time to play three games for Wichita before being recalled by the Pittsburgh club and in those three games, made eight hits in 10 times at bat to give him a final average of .398 and place him in third position. Bennett of Tulsa advance nine points to .385 which keeps him in the race.

The Tulsa club is now in the lead in team batting with a mark of .331, three points above last week and Des Moines is next with .303. Lincoln still leads in fielding with a team mark of .964.

Black Leading Pitcher.

Black of Tulsa is leading pitcher with 12 victories and only two defeats, but the record of his mate, George Blaeholder, sands out with 26 games won and only nine lost. Western league statistics, last Wednesday's games included, follow:

American League.

Heilman Holds the Pace.

Harry Heilmann, that cultured slugger of the Detroit Tigers, continued his lively batting pace during the past week and held his position at the head of all American league batters with an average to date of .399, an increase in a week of one point. In keeping in front, Heilmann made 11 hits in 27 times at bat in the seven games he played.

He holds something of a commanding lead over Al Simmons of the Athletics, who has recovered from an injury that kept him out of play six weeks or more. Simmons got back in a game during the last week and went to bat three times without getting a hit, which brought his average down three points to .391.

Gehrig Out of Slump.

After a slight slump, Lou Gehrig, the young New York slugger, who led the league most of the first half of the season, apparently has regained his form and during the week advanced in batting from .381 to .388 when in seven games he made 16 hits in 32 times at bat. Four of his blows were doubles, one a triple and four home runs. He passed George Burns of the Cleveland club during the week in total number of doubles when his four gave him 50 for the season. Burns has 48.

Although Babe Ruth dropped off a point in batting during the week to .352, he had one of the biggest weeks of the season because he poled six home runs to make his total 49 and now needs only 10 more to equal his 1921 record. If he can continue at his pace of last week, he will establish a new record this season. He now leads Gehrig by four.

Yanks On Top In Batting.

The Yankees established themselves more firmly at the top in team batting during the week by raising their mark a point to .309, while the Athletics, their only contenders for the honor, dropped two points to an even.300. The New Yorkers are away in front in total runs scored with 874, as against 540 for opponents. Detroit has scored 744 but has allowed opponents 714

Three teams, Chicago, Philadelphia and New York, are tied for first in team fielding with marks of .970.

Hoyt Leades the Pitchers.

Waite Hoyt, who added a victory to his string during the week, is leading the pitchers with 19 games won and only five lost. Shocker of the Yanks has now won 15 and lost six, while Pennock and Moore of the same team have won 15 each and lost seven. Ted Lyons of Chicago still leads in total number of victories with 20, but has lost 10. American league statistics, games of last Wednesday included, follow:

National League.

Pirate Sluggers Slipping.

Paul Waner's two hard hitting mates of the Pittsburgh club, Joe Harris and Clyde Barnhart, have deserted him in the race for batting supremacy of the National league, both having dropped down some and leaving Paul alone, though still with a commanding lead with an average of .388, six points above his mark of last week.

The list this week finds that great slugger Rogers Hornsby of the New York Giants, holding second place the farthest up he has been this season. His average is .361, eight points above his mark of last week. Rogers poled 10 hits in 18 times at bat during the week in the six games he played. Two were doubles and one was a homer. Waner gathered 15 hits in 31 times at bat in his eight games of the week. He had one double, a triple and a homer.

Haris in Third Place.

Joe Harris still is third with an average of .359, only a point below his mark of a week ago and only two points behind Hornsby. Mueller of the Giants is fourth with .348, a couple of points below his last week's average. Young Lloyd Waner, brother of Paul and also a member of the Pirates, has been crawling up week by week and now is next to Mueller with .340, having advanced from .334, which put him ahead of Stephenson of the Cubs, who fell off nine points to .339. Frisch of the Cardinals also fell down slightly to .335 and seems to have dropped out of the contest for top honors.

Old Cy First in Homers.

There was only a little activity in the league in home run hitting, old Cy Williams of the Phillies showing a spurt when he poled three over the wall to bring his total to 26. Hack Wilson of the Cubs got two in one game during the week and made his total 25 and Hornsby hit one to give him 24.

The Pirates as a team advanced in hitting, raising their team average two points to .310, which kept them well in advance of the Giants who are next with .298, also an increase of two points. Philadelphia and Cincinnati hold first place jointly in team fielding with marks of .973, the Cubs being one point back of them.

Benton Tops the Pitchers.

Larry Benton of the Giants tops the pitchers with 15 games won and only four lost, but the record of Jess Haines of the Cardinals is more impressive with 22 games won and only eight lost. Root of the Cubs has won the greatest number of games, 24, but has lost 12. National league averages, including last Wednesday's games, follow:

Tunney Queer Figure In Fistic Circles

Glove Champion Has Lived Model Life and Improved His Mind by Reading Good Books, But Modest Disposition Has Made Him Unpopular With Public.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 10—A strange character, this Gene Tunney—the most inexplicable in ring annals.

On that rain spattered night in Philadelphia, when he dethroned the mighty Dempsey, it seemed that he was destined to become the greatest idol in athletic annals; that crowds would worship him and lionize him and acclaim him and call him hero of heroes, greatest of the great.

Yet, this same Gene Tunney, almost from the hour of his spectacular triumph, has been unpopular. He hasn't been hated, reviled nor scoffed at. There never has been any evidence of mob condemnation of him. Yet he has become disliked and the difficult thing is to explain why.

Irish, But No Blarney.

Some have declared that it's because he's "swell headed" or because he has tried to "high hat" the crowds. Others have called him egotistical, or a hypocrite and things of the sort.

Yet Tunney is none of those.

Tunney is Irish—without the blarney. He is almost completely devoid of a sense of humor. He lacks the thing that's color and the something that is personality—at least that kind of personality which radiates the warmth and glow of friendliness. And Tunney is given somewhat to sarcasm and cynicism.

Cares Not for Crowds.

When he rose to the heights he wanted to be popular—as does every other human. But his methods were not the ones that make for public idolatry. He cared not for crowds, nor for the wild hurrah stuff. He wanted to be alone, rather than parade and strut his championship.

The truth is that he was too modest about himself and his achievement at the outset. And when he hid away and refused to exhibit himself, or be exhibited like some circus freak, the mob construed it to mean that he was holding himself as its superior.

Student of Good Books.

Tunney has probably read more books—the deep, deep ones— than all the ringmen that ever lived put together. The knowledge that he has gained from them is his proudest possession. It actually means more to him, so far as inner gladness is concerned, than possession of the kingship of pugdom.

And because it is dearest to his heart, and because the knowledge gained from those books is a passion with him, he has discoursed on them—and discoursed little or not at all about the fight game.

Every champion in ring history has limited his public discourses to fights and fighters—of battles won and battles lost. And most of them have done it with "dese" and "dose" and language of that sort.

Because Tunney doesn't talk about the tin-eared gentry, because his grammar is well nigh perfect and because he quotes from the classics and flips around the sayings of the sages—well, the public hopped right along into the idea that he felt himself above his profession—and that he was snobbing it "with his hifalutin' language."

Things He Hasn't Done.

So, because of these things, and because Tunney is an Irishman without blarney and without humor, and an individual without the intangible something that's human appeal—well, the public has turned against him.

And the oddity is that Tunney has become unpopular, not for what he has done, but for something he hasn't done.

None knows better than Tunney the degree and the extent of his unpopularity. Despite the pretense of a calloused nature, he is sensitive to a mighty extreme. All of it has cut into him—hurt him.

Does No Complaining.

But Tunney has never whimpered. He made his own bed and now that it is freighted with thorns that cut and bruise, he makes no outcry.

Only once has he made any definite comment. It concerns an incident that happened in Madison Square Garden, New York, a short time after he won the title from Dempsey. Then, for the first time, Tunney encountered the eccentric thing that is mob psychology.

It was a night when both Tunney and Dempsey appeared in the Garden to receive the belts emblematic of a championship that had been donated by sport writers.

Dempsey's entry into the ring was the signal for one of the wildest ovations in Gotham's fistic history; Tunney's advent provoked a storm of hisses and boos and catcalls.

And all this, mind you, was only a few weeks after Tunney had won the championship and before the public had actually come to feel that he was "high brow" and a 'high hatter."

"I'll never forget that night," said Tunney—and he won't, for the memory of it seared in his soul. "Dempsey climbed into the ring—the same Dempsey that the same crowd had hissed and booed only a few months before. Dempsey, the man from another state, the man I had whipped, climbed through those ropes—and the crowd went wild in its greeting for him.

Hooted in Home Town.

"I climbed through. Since my last appearance in that Garden I had done nothing but beat the 'unbeatable Dempsey' and brought to New York the first heavyweight championship it ever had possessed. I had done the thing that was supposed to be impossible. And yet, when I appeared for the first time as champion in my old home town, before my own townspeople, they hooted me until they nearly severed their nostrils."

It's all a mystery to Tunney—as it is to everyone else—perhaps even to those who hooted him.

For Tunney is himself a man of mystery, prompting within the crowds an antagonism which even the crowd itself finds it difficult to explain.

The strangest, most baffling figure in all ring lore—such is Gene Tunney, the man who never smudged his championship or his manhood with a single blur, a man who has lived cleanly and honorably, who never has affronted consciously, and yet who will go into history with the label attached:

"Pugilism's most unpopular champion."

HERE AND THERE IN BASEBALL

Elmer Smith, once a strong batter in the American league with the Cleveland club, is not doing so bad in the Pacific Coast league. On September 4 he hit two home runs to bring his total for the season to 40.

Everett ("Pid") Purdy, Lincoln's former midget outfielder, who recently joined the Cincinnati Reds, having been bought from Seattle, won a game for the Reds September 5 by driving out a home run with one man on base.

The Detroit club has bought Pitcher Jack Tising from the Burlington team in the Mississippi Valley league. The young man won 20 games this summer for the Burlington outfit.

Pitcher Frankhouse, who has been a power on the Houston team in the Texas league this season, has been called to the Cardinals to help in the finish of the pennant race. The St. Louis club owns the Houston club and uses it to develop young players.

Ray Kremer, that masterful pitcher of the Pirates, seems to have regained his old time form for the finish of the pennant race. In his game against the Reds September 6, he was superb, holding them to three scattered hits. Only 28 men faced him in the nine innings.

Young Comorosky, the boy outfielder who played sensational ball for Wichita in the Western league this summer, has been recalled by the Pittsburgh club, to which he belonged. In the game at Cincinnati on September 6 he replaced Cuyler and made a hit.

Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pirates, has made it quite well known that he is standing by his manager, Donie Bush, who had some trouble with some of his players during the season. Drey fuss has just announced that Donie has been signed for another year.

The death of Lave Cross in Toledo the other day recalled to the minds of some of his friends that away back in the early nineties Lave played third base wearing a catcher's mitt. Lave was a catcher in his early days and when transferred to third first retained the same glove, which in those days was permissible.

Pitcher Craghead of the Ogden club in the Utah-Idaho league has shown signs of having something. In 65 innings he has pitched, he has fanned 58 batters.

The first triple-header of the year was played between Bridgeport and New Haven on Labor day. One game was played in the morning and then a doubleheader followed in the afternoon.

Carl Weber, first baseman of the Wheeling club, was voted the most valuable player of the team this year and was given a prize of a watch.

The Johnstown and the Cumberland clubs will play off for the championship of the Middle Atlantic league. Cumberland won the first half of the season and Johnstown the second.

The New York Giants have completed the year's play against the Braves with 15 victories out of the 22 games.

The Dubuque team, in winning the pennant in the Mississippi Valley league, deserves great credit. They won it on the final day of the season by taking both games of a doubleheader from Cedar Rapids. About a month before the season ended, Dubuque was out in front, but had 15 games taken away because of having played an optional player. This threw the team into fourth place, but, regardless, it climbed back to the top.

Allen Benson, who started pitching for Dallas in the Texas league lat in August, is showing wonderful color. He pitched three complete games and part of a fourth as relief man without giving a base on balls.

The leading batter in the Utah-Idaho league season was George Hollerson of the Salt Lake club. He was also near the top as a pitcher.

When Babe Ruth hit five home runs in three consecutive games recently he equalled a world's record. He himself made that record in 1921 and it was done by Michael Muldoom of Cleveland away back in 1882. Mike Kelly of the old Chicago White Stockings, did it in 1885 and Ken Williams of the St. Louis Browns did it in 1922.

Pittsburgh has taken on a couple more live recruits to help in the home stretch race for the pennant. One is Walter Tauscher, right-handed pitcher recalled from Columbia in the South Atlantic league, and the other is Ralston Hemsley, a catcher from the Frederick club of the Blue Ridge league.

Tony Lazzeri, the star second baseman of the Yanks, was given a big floral horseshoe at a game in New York the other day by a committee representing the Italian-Americans of New York.

Lefty Grove had a big day with the Athletics when he won his nineteenth game of the season against Detroit on September 8. He fanned eight men and hit a homer, a single and a sacrifice fly that accounted for three runs.

Pat Crawford, third baseman who has done stirring things for the Grenville club in the South Atlantic league this season, will have a chance in the big show next spring. He has been purchased by the Yankees. The youngster hit .330 this year and had 24 home runs.

Wichita Falls in the Texas league was the first club in baseball to win 100 games this season, the trick having been turned on September 7. The following day, the Tulsa club accomplished it in the Western league.

Charley Root, pitcher de luxe of the Chicago Cubs, was the first major league hurler to win 25 games this season. He accomplished it when he beat the Cardinals on September 8.

Dewitt Lebourveau, that hard hitting outfielder of the Toledo club, who has been tried by two or three big league teams, is to have another chance. He has been bought by Connie Mack and will have a whirl with the Athletics next spring.

PROSPECTS FAIR AT BEATRICE HI

BEATRICE, Neb., Sept. 10—Prospects are fair for a winning football team at Beatrice high school this fall. The backfield squad includes a large bunch of new material and there are several gaps to fill in the line.

The loss of Frahm, backfield star of the 1926 Beatrice team, will be felt. Frahm will enter the University of Nebraska this fall.

Harry M. Garrett, who was graduated from the University of Nebraska, will be in charge of football and track. E. C. Higginbotham, Doane college grad, will coach basketball and direct athletics.

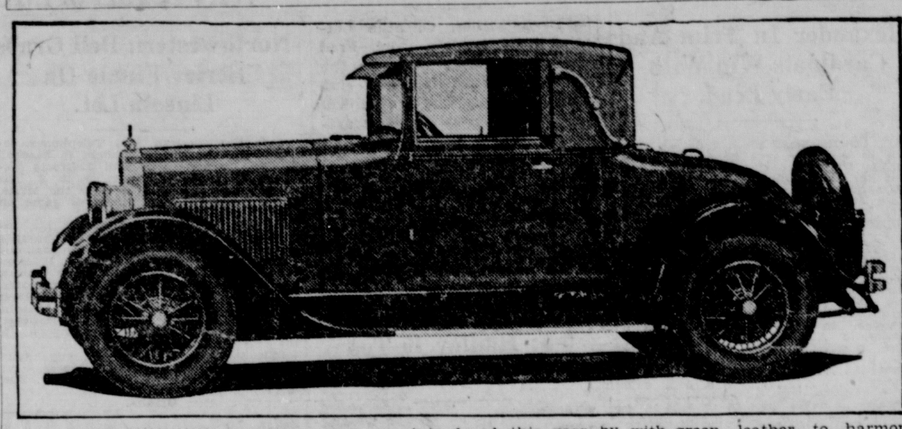

Ewing at Anselmo.

ANSELMO, Neb., Sept. 10—J. Warren Ewing, who attended the University of Nebraska and Colorado U., will coach athletics at Anselmo high again this season.

Hunter at Martell.

MARTELL, Neb., Sept. 10—Howard Hunter of Nebraska Wesleyan will coach athletics at Central Consolidated school of Sprague-Martell this year.

Cabriolet Roadster Added To Dodge Line.

This smart cabriolet roadster rounds out Dodge brothers' new line of fast fours. The design of its low hung, armory green body is suggestive of its great speed, and the spacious construction of the rumble and driver's seats assures tireless riding. It is typical throughout of the new spirit which has characterized every new car introduced by Dodge Brothers.

A beautiful cabriolet roadster is the third body type in Dodge brothers new line of fours. It is being formally introduced today by J. H. Markel, local Dodge brothers dealer, as a companion car to the sedan and coupe which have already attained such widespread popularity since their recent advent.

This cabriolet is typical of the new spirit which has characterized every car introduced this year by Dodge brothers and is suggestive of the pep and enthusiasm of youth. Its armory green body, low-hung and with the implication of great speed, is attractively designed and makes it fully as striking as anything on the road.

Performance is entirely in keeping with the smart appearance of the car. Few cars can match it in acceleration — 0 to 25 miles per hour, through gears, in less than seven seconds — and no American four can pass it on the road.

The top is clamped to the windshield pillars and can be easily and quickly folded down. It is covered with heavy khaki top material which makes a striking color combination with the armory green of the body and the black fenders and shields. The seats are upholstered with green leather to harmonize with the predominant body color.

The rumble seat is wide and the leg room is more than ample for comfort. The cushions are thick and soft and tilted at an angle which insures tireless riding.

Every convenience is embraced in its equipment which includes rear view mirror, stop light, moto-meter, adjustable instrument-board lamp, adjustable drum-type headlamps, carburetor control adjustment, ignition switch with theft lock, crank-type window regulators, automatic windshield wiper, cowl ventilator and nickeled bumpers front and rear. The car is equipped with five wire wheels.

The windows are of fine plate glass in the new French style and all hardware is of select quality, heavily nickeled.

Auto Notes

A wheel should always be washed thoroughly before checking for balance.

If the fan belt is slipping a little and ther are no tools with which to raise the pulley, it is a good plan to sandpaper the inside of the belt. This cleans off any grease that might cause it to slip and gives it better traction on the pulleys.

When cleaning the exterior of the engine with an oily rag, be sure to wipe it clean and dry, or the metal parts will collect a great amount of dust.

Loose gravel, or wet clay, will cause a car to skid, at times, at the least touch of the brakes.

A "creeping" motorist on traffic-congested highways is a menace and is directly responsible for motor accidents.

Frequent stops in traffic cause an increased consumption of fuel

CAR SALESMEN BEING HONORED

Star Force of Chevrolet Company Feted for Selling Ability.

A series of nation-wide holidays topped off with banquets, the tribute of a great company to its leading retail salesmen, is now being staged by the Chevrolet Motor company in honor of 2,790 retail salesmen who during the selling year ended August 1 achieved membership in the company's "72 Car club," a star salesmen's honorary organization.

This year's roll exceeds by more than three times the list for 1926, when only 873 salesmen qualified for membership, and furnishes a new index of the tremndous production and sales record established by this comapny during the year.

Winners of the coveted honor are being feted for one day at a series of special clebrations being held at the headquarters of the 43 zone sales offices during the first fifteen days of September.

Among the 1927 club members are 583 who also qualified in 1926, and who as a consequence have been presented with a diamond emblem by the company in token of their leadership among all the more than 14,000 Chevrolet salesmen in the country.

Membership is achieved by selling 72 or more cars during the twelve months between August 1 and August 1. During the 1926-1927 period 72 Car club members sold more than one-fifth of the 990,109 units produced by Chevrolet in that time.

The 72 Car club is believed to be the largest organization of its kind in the country. It has a national as well as a local zone organization corresponding to a lodge or fraternity, its officers being the sales leaders in their various districts. National officers are, president, E. F. Cleveland of Ensley, Ala., who sold 431 new cars during the year ended August 1; vice president, Chas. Zabel, Reading, Pa., with 337 new cars; secretary, L. H. Morrell of Johnson City, Tenn., 289 new cars; and treasurer, B. S. Reilly of Philadelphia, Pa., with 288 new cars.

In a message to the winners R. H. Grant, vice president in charge of sales stated that "Your extremely impressive selling achievemnt points to th great opportunity for the future. I can assure you that the policies which have helped so materially to bring about Chevrolet's success will be continued. They are, first, a good product that is constantly improved, and, second, the use of good business methods in selling it.

"There is every reason to believe that these same policies will bring us a large share of the business in our price class in the coming year."

Excessive Use of Choke Fouls Spark Plugs.

Choking a motor when starting serves to speed up the process, but it also permits so much raw gasoline to enter the combustion chamber via the carburetor that it forms excessive carbon that eventually the spark plugs become fouled and the valves coated.

Only Chrysler Standardized Quality Can Give This Greater Value

2-door Sedan, $735

New Chrysler "52"—52 and more miles an hour. Acceleration and smoothness no other low-priced car can approach. Full-sized bodies of wood and steel, with ample capacity for adult passengers. Saddle-spring seat-cushions. Fine mohair upholstery. Utmost handling ease with adjustable steering wheel. Indirectly lighted instrument board.

4-door Sedan, $1245

Great New Chrysler "62" — 6-cylinder motor. 7-bearing crankshaft. 62 and more miles per hour. Invar-strut pistons. Oil filter and air cleaner. Ventilated crankcase. Impulse neutralizer and rubber engine mountings. New cellular type radiator. 4-wheel hydraulic brakes. Road levelizers, front and rear.

WHO but Chrysler could produce such value as the Illustrious New Chrysler "72"? No other car at this price—or hundreds of dollars more—offers among a host of other features, counter-weighted seven-bearing crankshaft, rubber shock insulators—features introduced two years ago in the Imperial "80."

Who but Chrysler could produce such value as the Great New Chrysler "62"? Startling in its performance capabilities, its wealth of features, many of which have heretofore been found only on much costlier cars, and in its price several hundred dollars lower than is offered by other manufacturers for similar quality and value.

Who but Chrysler could produce such value as the New Chrysler "52"? Full-powered and fast. Big, roomy bodies, made of wood and steel, with ample capacity for adult passengers. And at prices only slightly in excess of what is asked for mere transportation.

Who but Chrysler could produce such value as the Imperial "80"? A luxury of performance and comfort absolutely unequaled by any other fine car in America.

These greater values are the unmistakable results of Chrysler's unique policy and plan of Standardized Quality in design and manufacture.

Through Standardized Quality each Chrysler clearly is the beneficiary of all the pioneering in design, exceptional skill in engineering, precision in manufacturing and vast resources concentrated in the development and building of all other Chrysler models.

And each Chrysler owner thus benefits because Chrysler Standardized Quality continues daily to produce unapproached values in automobile building.

Chrysler Imperial "80"—92 horse-power motor. 80 dashing easeful miles with whispering smoothness. An ease and luxury of driving and riding that makes motoring comfort take on a new meaning. Supremely beautiful and ultra smart. As fine as money can build.

New Chrysler "Red-Head" Engine—designed to take full advantage of high-compression gas, produces extra speed, still faster acceleration and even greater hill-climbing ability than the standards announced.

This remarkable development is standard equipment on the roadsters of the "52," "62," "72," and sport roadster of the Imperial "80." It is also available, at slight extra cost, for all other body types. For a reasonable charge it can be applied to earlier Chrysler cars now in use.

JEFF SCOFFS AT MODERN FIGHTER

Former Champ Laughs At Training Methods of Present Day.

Dempsey Goes a Golfing; Gene Steps Out in High Socity.

B. C. C. NICHOLET.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10—(U. P.)—A hard swing to the cheek of a golf ball or a fast round with a pate de fois gras, may be good training for a gentlemanly boxing convention, but they would not have helped much for a marathon prize fight of another day, Jim Jeffries, former heavyweight champion of the world, said today.

Training is 90 per cent of a prize fight, and if Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney are training—well, although Jeffries had not seen either one work out and did not like to take hearsay evidence as fact, he plainly had his doubts.

Not a Social Sport.

"Maybe you can make prize fighting a social sport and a polite profession, but I don't see how," he said, nursing his cauliflower ear—one of the oldest cauliflower ears in the industry.

Jeffries outlined his training program for his fights with Fitzsimmons, Johnson and the rest. It contrasted strangely with the so-called grind of Dempsey and Tunney at their luxurious quarters at Lincoln Fields and Lake Villa, respectively.

Dempsey's Easy Program.

Dempsey, on the day when he hasn't used up his energies to fishing and rest, has done five to seven miles of road work, three minutes and sometimes six with the punching bag, an equal period of skipping the rope and three to seven rounds of boxing with sparring partners. Tunney has boxed only four days since he arrived in Chicago, six rounds each day. His road work and gymnastics training correspond to Dempsey's.

Both have golfed a good deal and Tunney has dined at the suburban home of wealthy friends twice.

How Jeff Got Ready.

A typical day in Jeffries' camp in his training periods, as outlined today, included:

Half a dozen 25 to 100-yard sprints before breakfast.

Eight to 12 miles of road work—"and I ran, too—it was real road work."

Three games of handball.

Rope jumping, 1,500 to 3,000 times without a break.

Twenty minutes of bag punching without a break.

Real Fighting in Camp.

Twelve to 16 rounds with three or four sparring partners—"and it was fighting, not boxing. They put out everything they had and hit to hurt. Only I did not try to hurt them. I was the one that was training."

He ate sparingly of solid food, drank no tea or coffee and drank one glass of water a day—just before he retired.

"It took a month to get into condition for that kind of training," said Jeffries, "but when it was over, I could stand anything. Hard blows did not hurt and I could keep up a fast pace for round after round."

DENVER, Sept. 10—A ninth inning rally that netted three runs cinched third place for Des Moines as Denver lost the game, 6 to 4. Denver led, 4 to 3, in the eighth, but Cash was unable to stem the rally and Greer was called on for mound duty for Denver. Denver went scoreless in its slice of the ninth. The score:

MOLLA REPEATS TENNIS TRIUMPH

PHILADLPHIA, Sept. 10—(U. P.)—for the "eighth or ninth time"—according to her own admission — Mrs. Molla Mallory is again the middle states' tennis champion. She turned back a foreign invader to win the title today.

In the final round the former American champion defeated Miss Bouman, Dutch champion, 6-4, 6-4.

The American had little difficulty. Her placements were certain and her footwork faultless. The little Dutch girl was in constant trouble. Her service was weak and she seemed awkward on the courts. Twice she fell in the last set, once spraining her thumb.

Immediately after the singles match, Mrs. Mallory, paired with Miss Bouman, won the middle states' doubles championship by defeating the Palfrey sisters—Mianne and Sarah—of Brookline, Mass., 7-5, 6-3.

The young Massachusetts players started well against their more experienced opponents and had a 5 to 4 lead in the first set when Mianne's game went to pieces. Her service was bad and she idled two double faults.

From there on, the playing of the girls was erratic. They were puzzled by the close net game of Miss Bouman and offered poor opposition in the final set.

During an athletic meet held recently between France and Germany at Colombes stadium in Paris, Germany won 89 points to 62. Seraphin Martin of France defeated Dr. Otto Peltzer, Germany's world record holder, in a 300-meter race.

BRASS TACKS

sode would file indignant denials, but the fact remains that the ease with which Tunney thrashed the former champion and the distressing showing made by Dempsey never have been explained to the satisfaction of a mystified public.

Moving pictures of that affair in Quakertown were screened at one of Lincoln's theatres the past week. The movies can play their tricks, yet the screen story of that fight confirms in every detail the statements made by eye-witnesses of the first Tunney-Dempsey imbroglio.

One spectator in Philly last year assured the writer only a few days ago that Dempsey once smashed Tunney so hard that Gene staggered against the ropes, his hands hanging helpless against his hips; that Tunney's jaw was wide open to a finishing punch, yet Dempsey walked away as if deliberately refusing to sock his groggy foe.

The fan who takes his fighting seriously might scoff at the charge that Dempsey would decline to swing and then land a knockout punch, but when the pictures come along to verify in every detail this particular charge, the suspicion of "frameup" is given a positiveness which cannot lightly be waived aside as unworthy of consideration.

The shakedown, mind you, is three million dollars! The figures roll off the tongue without provoking an attack of stammering and they are easily read when put into cold type, but when compared with the intake from other ventures in the realm of sport, the Rickard-Tunney-Dempsey thing assumes mountain-like proportions.

As for instance: College football is the greatest money-puller of all the sports out here on Nebraska's rolling prairies. It is quite true that bloated admission prices are not collected at the gates. The average charge, as a matter of fact, is a modest $2 per Cornhusker game, on which basis the Huskers and their gridiron foes will compete a dozen years or more before the receipts can equal the rake-off from the gigantic soiree which Mr. Rickard is about to stage on the shore of Lake Mich.

Three million dollars! Ponder what it all means to the gents who are destined to jingle it in their jeans. Fight earnings, it would seem, know no limit short of the sky. And if the picking is so plenteous and the dupes are so easily plucked, why not a backroom arrangement to go right ahead with the plucking, with a five million gate as the goal?

If, as the Klein forecast proclaims, the fight is "in the bag," interest will center on his expose, which is scheduled for the coming week—in advance, not after, the fixers have played their final trump.

The scoffers, who take their professional ear-mauling seriously, will assure you that Mr. Rickard and his confreres are strictly on the level; that such an institution as a frameup of a heavyweight championship combat never has been known, but what if Klein correctly calls the turn?

ing a Garrison finish to beat the Omaha Burch Rods, 9 to 8.

Trailing the Rods by a two-run margin and the first two batters retired, the Links proceeded to shellack "Slim" McGrew for four resounding wallops and pull the ball game out of the fire.

Riley Socked It.

After Wano and Vache had passed away, Gottleber smacked a two-bagger to left and scored when Kuhel poked a two-ply wallop to right. Riley, Princeton, Neb., youngster, who was with the Links early in the season, strode to the plate and shot a sizzling liner to center which sailed over Harvel's head and was good for three bases, Kuhel scoring. Riley crossed the plate a few minutes later when Lorbeer drove the ball through the infield.

McGrew Foled a Homer.

The Rods took a 5-3 lead in the second when McGrew knocked the ball over the left centerfield fence. James and Johnson were on the sacks when McGrew poled the homer. It was the second time this season the ball has been knocked out of the park, Davis of Amarillo contributing the other wallop. The official record:

PLANS REORGANIZE NEBRASKA CIRCUIT

the average professional league, as we shall have but one player of previous professional experience on each club. This particular player is to be engaged as team manager. No other player will be signed who has taken part in professional ball.

"Starting with the crack amateurs, we expect to give the fans fast baseball as played by youngsters who are hustling to go up in their profession.

Confident of Success.

"The league cannot afford to hire high-priced players and will not attempt to use any of that type. With young players only and a modest salary limit, I am confident the Nebraska league can be made a success.

"The plan of organization provides that receipts in all cities shall be pooled and the expenses for all clubs paid out of the league treasury. Local managements will not be permitted to pay any of the bills. By this method we intend to forestall all suggestions of exceeding the salary limit rule."

CUP ON JOURNEY; FRENCHMEN WIN

Age Takes Its Toll.

Our supremacy has collapsed like a punctured balloon. Our champions still are great men, but they are old men now and so a French team that might have lost in straight matches five years ago was able to come on from behind and win at a time when it seemed that America couldn't lose.

We started the day one match up on the invaders, thanks to Tilden's great play of the first two days. We finished one match down and, unfortunately, that match was the one we paid off on.

Frenchmen Truly Great.

It may seem the part of indifferent logic to lay too much emphasis on our age and their youth. Cochet and La Coste, quite true, played great tennis. Any pair that beats Tilden and Johnston, even at the sunset of their respective careers, must play big-time tennis.

Yet, the fact of the matter today was that Tilden, having flashed his last great gesture on the two preceding days, suddenly began to flounder behind a lead of 2 to 1 over La Coste in the third set and with an amazing succession of errors, he passed rapidly out of the portrait.

"Little Bill" On Way Out.

Everyone saw the Davis cup going on a long journey by that time, since Johnston had proved on Thursday that he was no longer the Johnston of other and better days.

It meant that they were throwing the burden of everything on a slender, nervous, physically-weak little whippet of a man; a little man who probably knew in his heart that he was through long ago, since he came on for the match only at the earnest behest of those who guide the fortunes of American tennis.

Game to Do His Best.

He certainly had not asked for the great responsibility that was now to be his. But, having acquired it gratis and unsolicited, he accepted it as only a fighting player can.

For a time he dominated oCchet with his forehand placements and his accuracy. But suddenly he lost both the touch and the pace and the Frenchman ran out the first set. That meant that the cup no longer was for us, since Cochet is generally recognized as the greatest five-set tennis player the world over.

Conceded No Quarter.

But Johnston conceded nothing. As a strictly non-neutral gallery of 12,000 openly pried him on, Johnston struggled through the second set to win like the Billy of old. It was the last gesture, however, a gallant gesture, but Billy's last just the same.

He was dead on his heels from that point, but ever and anon this gamester of the courts would lash out in desperation and when he did Cochet was in for a trimming on that particular rally or in that particular game.

Rally Only a Flash.

This didn't happen often in the third set, where Johnston was too weak to get his smashes over the net, but in the final set, with Cochet leading at five to two and needing only a point for the match, Johnston simply refused to let him have it. He out-steadied and outguessed the Frenchman to win the game and then the next. And then, just when the crowd was beginning to vision a last, desperate stand in the interest of dramatics, Johnston's weariness overtook him again and it was all over.

The match was lost, the cup had gone, the harvest season was no more, the great drought was on.

FRISCO MAN WINS STATE GOLF TITLE

DEL MONTE, Cal., Sept. 10—John J. McHugh, San Francisco Olympic club star, is the new amateur golfing champion of California.

He won the title late today on the Del Monte links by defeating Chuck Hunter, Jr., University of Washington student, whose home is in Tacoma.

In the final round, the score was eight up and seven to play, McHugh rallying after being four down in the earlier stages of the match.

The second nine of the first 18 holes were won in a row by McHugh, which put him five up at the beginning of the afternoon round. He increased this lead gradually until the match ended at the eleventh hole of the second 18-hole round.

TABOR WINNER IN ANTELOPE CONTEST

F. Tabor won the blind bogey contest at Antelope Golf club Saturday afternoon. Tabor shot an 87 and had a 10-stroke handicap.

FISHER-KISSLER IN TITLE MATCH

Morris Fisher, versatile Lincoln high athlete, and Fred Kissler will meet today in the final for the Antelope golf club championships. The match will be a 36-hole contest, play starting at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m.

Hadley allowed the Sox only four hits in the second game. The scores:

UHLE PUZZLE TO BOSTON RED SOX

Cleveland Scores 3-1 Victory In Final At Beantown.

BOSTON, Sept. 10—The Cleveland Indians played their last game of the season here this afternoon and beat the Boston Red Sox, 3 to 1. George Uhle, who pitched for the Clevelanders, was in rare form and the Sox found him for only eight hits.

Boston's only run of the game was scored in the eighth inning when Buddy Myer, pinch hitting for Lundgren, singled to left, then took secon on Rothrock's one base hit, and scored on Bill Regan's sacrifice fly to Langford in deep center.

Delmar Lundgren was on the mound for the Sox, and although he allowed but eight hits, three of them came in the first inning and resulted in a brace of runs. The score:

BARNARD ELECTED TO SUCCEED BAN B.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10—President E. S. Barnard of the Cleveland club, has accepted a contract for three years at a salary of $40,000 a year to succeed Ban Johnson as president of the American league, it was said reliably here today.

In November, Ban Johnson will step out of the office which he has held since the American league was founded and at that time Barnard will be the head of the league, it was understood.

The giant stadium near Amsterdam, Holland, where the Olympic games are to be held next year, will hold 40,000 spectators. The structure, built of reinforced concrete, is 285 yards long and 185 yards wide.

OMAHA PHONES WIN BALL GAME

Northwestern Bell Grabs Series Finale On Lincoln Lot.

The Northwestern Bell Telephones defeated the Lincoln Telephones in baseball on the Twenty-second and J streets diamond Saturday afternoon, 9 to 2. The victory gave the Omaha club the series, Lincoln having lost a previous game on the Omaha diamond.

Inability of the Lincolnites to hit, together with a bunch of errors brought defeat. In the first inning, Luby beat out an infield hit and Carroll singled. H'Lavac pitcher and clean-up hitter, then shot a sharp double over first base and scored two runs. Simpson for Lincoln tightned and fanned the next two men. Lincoln was unable to score in the first. However two walks and a double by Simpson, in the fourth scored two runs.

Lincoln was able to garner only four hits off H'Lavac. Yet his wildness, on several occasions put him in danger. The score:

MOORE IN FORM; BLANKS BROWNS

Yankees Continue Hold Jinx Over St. Louis; Win, 1-0.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10—Wilcey Moore, conceded to be the best relief pitcher in either league, demonstrated today that he could perform just as well for a full game when he shut out the Browns, 1 to 0, in the Yankee's twenty-first victory over St. Louis this year.

The Yanks scored in the eighth inning when Meusel led off with a double. He was advanced to third by Lazzeri's sacrifice and brought in on a sacrifice fly by Gazella. Combs, Yankee centerfielder made his 200th hit of the year, being the first batter in the American league to amass that total.

Stewart, who pitched for the Browns, made three of the seven hits, in as many trips to the plate, while Moore fanned an equal number of times. The score:

GRAIN MARKETS.
By International News Service.
CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 10.

WHEAT—Grains broke badly today on short selling and general liquidation and ended the week lower. Wheat was off 2¾c to 3c for the day and 1⅝c to 2¾c for the week; corn 2¾ to 3¼ and 4¾ to 5¾; oats 1c to 1¼ off and ¾c up to ⅝c lower.

Expectation that the Canadian government report Monday would be bearish was an added wheat depressant. The government September report, expected to show a decrease, actually predicted 10,000,000 bushels more and weather generally was favorable.

Although the government corn report was not construed as either bullish or bearish, the market has been weak throughout the week and all rallies lost almost as soon as made.

OATS—Oats dropped with other grains in spite of bullish figures in the September report.

BUICK BUILDS NEW FOUNDRY

Practically All Iron Casting Done Mechanically in New Plant.

FLINT, Mich., Sept. 10—The Buick Motor company has increased its supervision of Buick quality by providing foundry facilities adequate to all its casting requirements. A new group of buildings which has just swung into production gives Buick the largest and most modern grey iron foundry in the world.

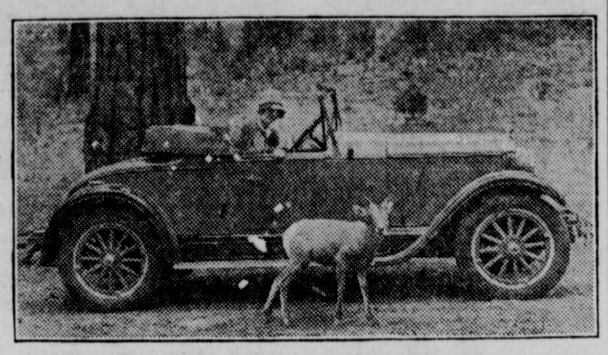

The outstanding feature of Buick's new foundry is the ingenuity with which machines have been made to perform the vast bulk of foundry work. Specially-designed mechanical conveyors shoulder practically all heavy burdens. Core manufacture, assembly, and baking, the charging and discharging of the six 96-inch cupolas, the pouring of molten metal, and the cooling, cleaning and finishing of castings all rely upon machinery to an extent which gives the new foundry little semblance to foundries of the past. Human effort is reduced to a minimum, with resultant increase both of capacity and of the safety factor.

Persons versed in foundry practice find Buick's new foundry amazingly different from most. There is none of the gloom, the stifling heat, or the confusion of workmen dodging hither and thither with hot ladles over congested floor. Buick's foundry is as light an dairy as a well-planned machine shop. It is ventilated by forced draught which keeps the air circulation constant. Machinery has supplanted most of the panting, sweating humanity, replacing mere picturesqueness with the real romance of efficiency.

Buick's new foundry consists of the foundry building proper, 657 feet long and 123 feet wide, containing cupolas, core room, pouring room, and part of the cooling conveyor, together with its elaborate conveyor system; the cleaning plant, 680 feet long, 240 feet wide, containing sand blasts, tumbling mills, and other equipment to prepare the castings for machining; a third buildign, 161½ by 201 feet, housing stock rooms, offices, dining rooms, and a machine repair department for maintenance of the foundry equipment, and several lesser buildings housing knock-out room, wiring department, and various storage units.

The steadily-growing public demand for Buick, it was explained, necessitated addition of the new building, as a means of insuring continuous production of Buick motor cars, and of keeping close check on Buick quality. This demand has received such impetus, through the introduction of Buick for 1928, that the foundry will be in full production almost at once, pouring 750 tons of iron in an 8½-hour working day.

CHANDLER SHOWS NEW SPORTSTER

Latest Low Priced Open Model Made on Special Six Chassis.

"In creating the new Chandler Sportster on the Special Six chassis, states Mr J. L. Kennard, local Chandler distributor, Chandler presents an open model to the motor car buying public which is a strict departure from any thing in the low priced open car field.

"This car with the double cowl and windshield, low hung body and trim lines is an entirely new addition to the Chandler line. The Sportster is the only open car on the market today at a low price which provides the sportive atmosphere and novel touches which this model possesses."

The outstanding feature of this new creation is that it is equipped with double, nickel trimmed windshields. The front windshild has been made more serviceable through the addition of wings. Both the front and rear windshields are adjustable and may be folded flat if desired, thus providing ample protection from the wind or allowing cool riding when the days are warm and sultry.

Finished in a beautiful duotone combination of Cumberland Beige with Mountain Ridge Green mouldings, it is a car that wins instant admiration. The rear door incorporates a panel in apple green. The wheels are of Mountain Ridge Green with Cumberland Beige stripes, adding a further pleasing effect. The optional color is Andrews Gray with Blue Devil Blue mouldings and rear door panel.

Like all other 1928 Chandler models, a new radiator cap and a new Chandler insignia worked out in harmonizing colors, further serves to enhance its appearance.

Other features with the sportster are entirely new full crown fenders, upholstery in striking brown Spanish leather over low-hung seats, and completely appointed instrument board. All the instruments are pleasingly grouped under glass and indirectly lighted. An electro lock, a protection from theft, and light control from the steering wheel are innovations.

"While the car is in Chandler's lowest price series, nothing has been omitted which might be desired in a fashionable sport touring car," Mr. J. L. Kennard stated further. "In short it is modish in appearance, fast and serviceable. It incorporates a power plant embodying the notable Chandler Pikes Peak motor principle of engine design, which has enabled Chandler to go out and establish many remarkable world records."

Mechanical advantages include the well known "One Shot" system of automatic chassis lubrication, an oil purifier, an air cleaner on the carburetor, high pressure lubrication to all camshaft, crankshaft and connecting rod bearings, automatic thermostat and four wheel external contracting brakes. A self oiling spring shackle silencer regulates the tension on the shackles and exerts a gentle snubbing action when traveling over rough, uneven roads.

This new sportster, Chandler's latest presentation, can be seen at the sales rooms of J. L. Kennard, local Chandler distributor, where it is now on display.

Makes Tires' Task Easier.

Keeping the springs functioning is a matter of economy as well as comfort. If the springs are rusty unlubricated and generally run down, it means that the tires are called upon for overtime work to compensate for this defeat. Springs lacking in resiliency force the tires to absorb many more road shocks than necessary.

EUROPE BUYS MANY WHIPPETS

Sale of This Particular American Car Greatest in History.

Sales of Whippet cars in Europe, through Willys-Overland Crossley, Ltd., the British sales organization for Willys-Overland, are reported to be the largest in the history of the company in a statement just issued by John N. Willys, who arrived on the Leviathan, Monday.

"They are commensurate with our sales in Canada," said Mr. Willys, "where the increase for the first seven months of this year was 68 per cent over sales for the same period of last year.

"Both the English and the Canadian companies are definitely on a quantity production basis and it is reasonable to look forward to a substantially increased financial return from these companies to the parent organization within a reasonable time."

Commenting on sales in the United States, Mr. Willys said, 'Whippet sales have consistently held at a high point despite the general effect on the market of rumors regarding the new Ford production.

"Our dealers have reduced their stocks of used cars by 33 per cent during the past 60 days and this has resulted in the cleanest used car situation in the history of our sales organization, at the season of the year. This is the strongest possible unsettlement of the used car market from the new competition which may develop later in the year.

'Field stocks and production plans have taken into consideration such new developments as are certain to occur. Having pioneered in the field of modernized light car construction and with a record of 125,000 Whippet cars delivered in the first year of its production, we have no intention of relinquishing the position it has achieved.

"Because of fundamentally advanced design there is no necessity for changes in models in Willys-Overland production and therefore we are not facing any necessity for large outlays in machinery or equipment. The only concern of the manufacturing department will be that of taking cars of minor refinements as they may become advisable.

"The semi-annual statement of Willys-Overland showed it to be in a strong financial position with $15,000,000 in cash. All deferred items were written off in that statement in keeping with the policy of the financial division and earnings for the first half of the year were highly favorable in comparison with the same period in any other year in the history of the company.

"Inventories are well balanced and consistent with production. The improvements and additions in machinery, buildings and equipment which were made necessary by the increased production in both Whippet and Willys-Knight models have been heavily depreciated in the statement of the company and we are in the strongest possible position to meet the increased demand for cars which our August sales figures and early September orders indicate are certain for the balance of the yea."

MOTORS AND THEIR CARE

Shifting Test.

The test of a good driver is in shifting from high to low without noise. The trick lies in speeding up the engine while the gears are shifted to neutral, until the car runs at what the driver believes would be 20 miles an hour; then throwing the clutch and shifting to second at the same time.

To Check Vibrations of the Radiator.

In many cars still in service, the radiator is mounted directly upon the front frame cross member. In this position, it is subjected to the stresses of road shock and is likely to become loosened. This accounts for a great deal of the noise in many of the older cars. An effective remedy is to cut an old inner tube into strips to make a cushion between the base of the radiator and the frame. Care should be taken to make the mooring bolts absolutely tight in order to obtain the advantages given by the rubber cushion.

Experience Necessary for Adjustment of Carburetor.

It is a poor policy to attempt to adjust the carburetor when ignorant of its combinations. Sometimes an owner does not believe he is "getting enough mileage" and starts to tinker with the adjustments. As a rule, he knows little or nothing about how to make these adjustments, and instead of making conditions better he makes them worse. The driver and owner of a machine who wants to know about every piece of apparatus on his car should start in on his instruction book. Study it thoroughly from beginning to end. Learn it so that it is not necessary to consult it every time something is believed to be wrong. Some motorists do more harm than good by constantly "playing" with this or that. If the car is running well, leave it alone, especially the carburetor. Few motorists realize that the carburetor mixture must be absolutely right if the engine is to work properly. This mixture is, usualy 12 to 15 pounds of air to one of gasoline. If the carburetor needs adjusting, let an expert do the work.

Failure of Electrical Equipment.

Electrical equipment wears both mechanically and electrically. Mechanical wear is limited mostly to bearings, brushes and timer-distributors, and can be determined by ordinary mechanical methods. Electrical wear, however, can be detected only by the series test lamp, the voltmeter, the ammeter, the Wheatstone bridge the growler and the heavy discharge test set. Insufficient lubrication usually develops generator or ignition-unit bearing trouble on the road. The battery is, however, the unit that requires most attention, yet is frequently neglected. When water is not added, the plates sulphate and then there are no lights for the drive home. Corrosion is permitted to form and insulating film on the battery posts and the engine will not start because the current cannot penetrate this film to reach the starting motor and the ignition coil. Damage to all types of starting mechanisms is frequently the owner's fault. An advanced spark at starting usually results in damage, as the starting motor is suddenly reversed by reverse rotation of the engine crankshaft. Re-engaging the starting motor when the engine is rocking back is another cause of emergency calls. Most owners make the mistake of operating the starting motor instead of using the crank or being towed when the battery is nearly discharged. The large withdrawal of current by the starting motor reduces the battery voltage to such an extent that the voltage at the ignition coil is insufficient to create a firing spark. The lower the efficiency of the starting motor, the more numerous will be the emergency calls.

Making good time is a matter of driving consistently at a reasonable speed. This rate should be neither so fast as to be dangerous nor so slow as to kill the pleasure of motoring.

Former Berlin Girl to Teach At Bryn Mawr

Living in Berlin, getting a doctor's degree from the University of Heidelberg, crossing the waters of the Atlantic four years ago to change her home from Berlin to Nebraska, and now to teach in the German department at Bryn Mawr —these are the experiences of Miss Ruth Hofrichter, daughter of Mrs. J. O. Hofrichter of Lincoln.

Miss Hofrichter spent the greater part of her early life in Berlin. Her father, a colonel in the German army, was killed during the World war. While attending the University of Heidelberg, Ruth majored in economics. She, of course, spoke English before she ever came to America. After she had received her doctor's degree in 1921, she left for the United States and spent her first two years in this country teaching at Midland college, Fre-

Many Honors Paid Lincoln Woman at Bar Convention

rs. Margaret J. Carns returned Thursday from a ten days stay in the east where she attended the National Association of Women Lawyers and the American Bar association at Buffalo, N. Y. Mrs. Carns was re-elected vice-president of the National Association of Women Lawyers. She was toastmistress at the banquet of the Women Lawyers held at the Hotel Statler. She also spoke at the noon luncheon of the Zonta club, one of the largest clubs in Buffalo. The Zonta club is a national organization and each club has a representative from every line of work that woman is engaged in. Mrs. Carns spoke at the Kappa Beta Pi legal sorority luncheon.

She was elected a member of the local council of the American Bar association for Nebraska. She and the president of the Women Lawyers were also asked by the president of the American Bar association to serve on the reception committee, the first time this honor has been accorded to women lawyers. Mrs. Carns and four prominent women attorneys were invited by the chief of customs at the port of Buffalo to make an evening trip in his speed boat up the Niagara river to Niagara Falls. The boat was one used by revenue men at night to catch smugglers in liquor traffic. Milady Must Wear Snakeskin Chokers, Shoes and Bracelets To Be Fashionable This Fall

"With bells on her fingers and rings on her clothes
This is how Milady's fashion goes."

This fall the more snakeskin madame wears, the more fashionable she will be. She can wear snakeskin shoes, carry a purse to match, have her cloth coat lined with reptile skin, have her hat trimmed with quills or flowers of the same skin, and even the cuffs of her gloves with 'diamonds on their backs'! If she is looking for an investment, she might purchase a snakeskin jacket. And snakes are very poular for evening wear. There are tiny snakeskin bracelets with the jewelled silver heads. If one wants something more realistic there is the heavy, thick choker made of huge silver plated seals with two vivid snake heads lighted by brilliant green eyes for frontal decoration. Contrary to supposition, these ornaments are very popular, in the east, especially. Lizard skin dyed a dark midnight blue is very

SOCIETY FOLKS IN the PICTURES

With the summer season a thing of the past, and the new season not yet begun, social activities are at a standstill. The social calendar holds but one or two large weddings for the next week or two, and but few betrothal announcements. Of the latter, the most prominent is the engagement of Miss Priscilla Towle, to Thomas Tiffany Varney, jr., of Broken Bow, which is announced today by Miss Towle's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brother Towle.

There will be quite a gap in the young married set this season, with four of its most prominent couples having gone to make their homes elsewhere. One of the most popular of the young matrons is Mrs. Leslie Grainger, who with her two children, Olive Ladd, and Robert Leslie, left Friday evening for Delta, Colo., to join Mr. Grainger.

Mrs. William Grainger left a week ago for Okanogon, Wash., where she and Mr. Grainger will locate. She will return to Lincoln for a short time before going west permanently.

Mrs. H. H. Branch, jr., left with Mr. Branch the forepart of last week for Salem, Ore., where they will make their home.

Mrs. Edward Kelly and Mr. Kelly left Tuesday for Fresno, Calif., where they will reside.

The marriage of Miss Marguerite Eastham to Wilbur Shainholtz was solemnized last Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Shainholtz had as her only attendant, her sister, Miss Della Bird Eastham.

A very charming bride of the past week is Mrs. William Francis Jones, who before her marriage Wednesday evening, was Miss Darleen Woodward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Woodward.

Before her marriage, Saturday, September 10, Mrs. Hutchinson was Miss Pearl E. Powley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Powley of Woodbine, Ia.

close to come to the falls. She said that the suction of the current could be felt in the speed boats as they neared the falls. She laughed as she related how the chief of the csutoms and the five women members of the party unwrapped eight cases of liquor and threw them overboard. They belonged to a catch of fifty cases that the officers had made the day before. They crossed the Peace bridge over into Canada and after luncheon at a beautiful old inn on Canadian soil, were taken by motor to old Fort Erie on Lake Huron and many noted places in Canada. They returned in time to attend the American Bar association dinner in the evening. Mrs. Carns left for New York City where she visited her son and family.

About sixty women lawyers from over the United States attended this convention.

MILADY MUST WEAR SNAKESKINS

popular for footwear and purses to match.

Speaking of purses, they are becoming more colorful and tricky than ever. Some of them are so large they look like small old-fashioned carpet bags, and again some of them are so small you can almost tuck them away in your gloves.

French imported "challie" shawls are very popular in New York. They are about three feet square and are folded in a triangle and tied cowboy fashion at the left shoulder. Some of them are done in Paisley designs and others are scattered with gaudy roses and clusters of flowers—but all are briliant, and look like they belonged to the old country, perhaps some peasant's costume in sunny France.

Imported Shawls.

There are shawls imported from Japan and they are in vivid colors with gorgeous hand paintings of peacocks and parrots and others are finely embroidered in a motley of shades.

The Coolie coat has become the mother of many garments. There are gaudy linen ones in beach coats, dainty thin coats as negligees and even some made for evening wear. The evening coats are often of brocaded velvets or elaborate metal cloths lined with fine sils and often ostrich trimmed. Some Coolie coats have been reformed into afternoon or even street garments. The afternoon coats are usually of pastel shades and fashioned of Dunwoodie crepe or heavy sport silks. The street coats are of navy blue or black crepe silks with more conservative designs and colors. They are always lined with a contrasting or light color.

The French tam-o-shanter is very popular on the eastern coast among the younger set. They are very small and usually tilt at rakish angles. They are most seen in black and navy blue but an occasional white or red tam may be spied in a crowd. They are entirely devoid of ornament save a tiny impish tassel at the very top.

Flowers in Style.

"It won't be long now," said the feather flower to the glass flower as they rested on their Fifth avenue counter and watched the crowds pass by. Clusters of cosmos in varying shades of pink are fashioned of the tiniest and finest feathers. Forget-me-nots and lilies of the valley are of pure glass. For sport wea the felt flowers are most popular. They are prettiest as thick lotus blossoms.

Dresses are trimmed with dozens of bone rings at the hemline and buttons are no longer a necessity, in fact they are often hid where they are serving some purpose. But they are in plain view where used for decoration. The sleeves may have as many as fifty tiny buttons scattered in playful designs.

And ornaments—they are becoming "bigger and better" every day. A huge black suede purse was almost hid by a mammoth silver plated stork standing nonchalantly on the front. And felt hats may be trimmed with large metal question marks or fish that seem almost as plump as black bass.

So if one wears a helmet or a Russian coronet for the fall hat, you can't help but be in style. But it must be different.

Should you prefer to achieve striking individuality to your millinery, come to HERPOLSHEIMER'S and choose YOUR hat from the dozens of lovely new models arriving daily. Mr. Bailey has spent another week in New York markets in search of the newer things—nothing can be said as to just what the fabrics will be, but be assured that they will be of the good quality. There are dozens of new velvets, soft crushable hats, with tiny brims turned up or down, with no brims at all, or with large ones, to serve as effective backgrounds for flirtatious glances! Modern Eve wishes to especially urge the college co-ed to come in and view the offerings of so many clever variations as there are types of feminine beauty. You'll find these intriguing velvet hats in colors to match your every costume, and in head sizes to accomodate every sort of bob or artful coiffure. Truly GOLD'S is a mecca for busy mothers who like to shop satisfactorily for their young hopefuls in as little time possible. Come down tomorrow SURE for the things you FORGOT yesterday!

No Wonder

DISCRIMINATING women like to patronize GIFFEN'S, for they are assured of perfect permanents, marcels, facials or what not. They found the public so very appreciative of their offering of permanents at $10.00, that they are extending this courtesy one more week. Modern Eve feels that you should investigate the merits of the GIFFEN BEAUTE SHOPPE.

To Sleep or Not To Sleep

THAT is the question," especially these warm nights, not when you have the right kind of mattress under you—the kind made at the LINCOLN MATTRESS FACTORY! They'll renew your old ones in a day's time if necessary; convert your ancient feather beds into luxurious sleep-producers; or sell you brand new mattresses—call them.

Smile awhile and give your face a rest;
Stretch awhile and ease your manly chest;
Reach your hand up towards the sky;
While you watch them with your eye.
Jump awhile and shake a leg, there, sir;
Now step forward, backward, as you were.
Then reach right out to someone near,
Shake his hands and smile.

Off To School

Mother, mother, where's my cap?
And where's those little stencils?
You know I just can't make that map
Without those colored pencils!

And where's that old arithmetic?
I laid it here last night—
I've worked it till I'm sick—
And not one problem right!

Say, I'll surely have to hurry;
It's almost nine o'clock.
And now, to cap this flurry,
There's a big rip in my sock!

Mother, mother, come here quick,
And darn this great big hole;
Brush my hair down smooth and slick,
Don't let that bunch and roll.

Well, now I guess I'm ready, Mother—
Good-bye; sure I'll be good—you bet!
I know I'm not a bit of bother,
I'm just your youngest pet.

Raving About Waving

YOU may hear any of a number of women doing it, after they have had a permanent at the CHARLOTTE BEAUTE SHOPPE. Mamie Hickey's Shorthand Diary

We never can trust the men, my dears,
We never can trust the men;
Their stories may sound so plausible
Of how and where and when—

But how can we trust the men, my dears?
Their alibis might suffice—
Sublime our faith—'till they forget
And use the same yarn twice.

METAL TRIMMINGS.

Metal trimming is prominent both for hats and dresses.

In the evening group, lame cloths are outstanding, and lace or net in overskirt treatment is also important.

Shawls for evening are presented in interesting arrangements.

Points on New Millinery

Napoleon blue belting and black felt afford an unusual treatment in a close turban, fashioned with alternate strips and drawn up into projecting points in front. Lower left to right.

The numerous ways utilized to create interest in brim lines take an effective turn in this rose beige soleil velours. The upward movement of the brim is accented by the contrast of rose beige velvet ribbon, which is twisted and flared over the crown.

Black felt resorts to the enlivening influence of gold metallic braid, to casually turned back band at one side achieves an effective result. This band continues its way round the crown, finishing at a high point at the side.

Doane Notes

Doane college began its fifty-sixth year of existence last week with the registration of students on Friday and Saturday, September 9 and 10. A large percentage of the old students is back and a fine new group will enter the freshman class.

Great progress is expected this year throughout the entire music department as an increase in the enrollment over last year's record is anticipated.

This department is fortunate this year in finding an excellent substitute for C. Burdette Wolfe who is studying in Northwestern university during the first semester Miss Muriel Enid Thomas, B. Mus., (Tarkio college) who has been teaching at the State Normal school at Dillon, Mont., has been selected to fill Mr. Wolfe's place during his absence. Miss Thomas is interested in public school music especially in the relation of the violin to that phase of the work. She will make her first appearance in Crete this Friday at the opening meeting of the Crete Woman's club. Miss Thomas has a pleasing personality and has been very popular both as an instructor and as a concert artist wherever she has appeared.

The dramatic department is due for a big year with many new students attracted to the excellent work done by Mary-Ellen Inglis. This department also includes the Doane Players.

Minerva's Mail

Take Your Troubles to Minerva

"Love Affairs" Minus Love Bring Despair and Disgrace — One Form Of Human Selfishness Is Demonstrated By the Husband Who Makes No Effort Toward Companionship In the Home — "Roger" Gives Us Food For Thought Today.

What Is Justice?

Dear Minerva: For Pete's sake why agonize and sympathize so much with "Dione?" All who write speak of her "mistake." What "mistake" did she make? A girl her age is old enough to be human and to take care of herself.

It should be remembered, or learned, that though most of us are capable of love affairs, very few of us are capable of love. We certainly are not capable of love until we have reached maturity—and few of us after that time has come. All over the world love affairs pass for love. They are not love, but they are called love. Why worry over the logical outcome of only 'being in love?" Why expect all love affairs to end in marriage or in love? Intelligent people will not let them end in marriage unless they first turn to love—to love that is considerably more than sex and romanticism.

I notice the man is panned rather hard in most such cases as that of "Dione." Personally, I think the man is a fool who does not take all he can get. The girls always find it quite easy to "love" someone else again—and that right quickly. They would find it so, and do, no matter how many times they "love."

Why not have a little justice and less belly-aching over nothing?

A MAN.

A. We all "agonize and sympathize" with "Dione" because there are just such persons as you in the world, you who so wrongly sign your name "A Man." You are the self-centered, heartless sort of man who looks upon girls as mere playthings, exploiting them for your own amusement, and failing utterly to recognize them as the sensitive, emotional, often ignorant little humans which they are.

You say the girl finds it easy enough to "love" someone else again. That is not true. Many girls, unfortunately, find it necessary to adopt a cynical, light attitude toward men and love, coming to that state of mind through a series of experiences of misplaced trust. When they associate with men such as you, they decide that if all men are simply out for what they can get, they too will go out for what they can get. Which is a tragic conclusion and leads to bitterness and unhappiness.

But the average girl is romantic and home loving. She wants most of all real love and respect and devotion and all that stands for and means. She is often diverted from her honest ambitions through her desire for popularity and good times, through the influence of experienced, hard and unscrupulous men, and becomes something of a gold-digger, something of a cynic.

There should be no "love affair" without love, and love should end in marriage. It is when these fundamental principles are forgotten or ignored that troubles commence. If every man kept his sex life clean and honorable there would be greater happiness in life.

Cheap thrills such as are found through "love affairs" lead to nothing but unhappiness and often disgrace and tragedy. Many girls are tricked into such cheap affairs through their inexperience, their longing for attention, admiration and love.

Within His Shell.

Dear Minerva: I am coming to you with my troubles. I hope you will not throw my letter in the wastepaper basket for it will mean a great deal to me if you will print it because I know my husband will read it and perhaps he will realize how lonely I am for it is of him I am writing.

Before I begin my story let me give you a glimpse of our home. We live in a real nice apartment that I keep neat and clean at all times. I do all of my own work and you can't tell it is wash day at our house after nine o'clock. I am always neat and clean and I am always fixing nice things to eat and doing little dainty things to make my home pretty but oh Minerva no one pays the least attention to anything I do. I have told you this much so if you can see anywhere I have failed you can tell me.

I am always ready to smile and have a kind word for everyone but I never get a smile in return.

Here is my trouble. Hubby has changed so he comes home to lunch and in the evening for dinner. You would think he had just come from the funeral of the only friend he had. He never has a smile, hardly ever says a word and oh in the evening he gets the paper and pipe and reads and smokes until I could scream. Not a word will he say all evening. I read the paper, your wonderful Mail first, but truly I think he just looks at the paper to keep from talking to me. He never takes me any place. We haven't been to the show together for over three years. And I am so lonely for companionship. I love him in spite of all his ways and I feel my nerves were ready to snap.

Please don't say to go away for a change because he would not care if I was gone forever. If he did care he would never let on. He never tells me he loves me. Now don't think I am a nagging wife. Far from it. Or a clinging vine. But I would love to have him visit with me and joke and laugh like he used to in our sweetheart days. It hasn't been so many years since our sweetheart days. I am only thirty-three years old now. We have a lovely daughter sixteen years old and she is a wonderful girl. If I did not have her I don't think I could ever stand it.

Minerva it can't be that he is ashamed of me for I am not bad to look at. I have a lovely head of auburn hair that is bobbed with Hubby's consent, and I am small and always neat and clean. I have lots of friends but he doesn't want me to bring them home. He doesn't even want my girl to bring her friends home. I am afraid I will lose my youthful looks if Hubby doesn't change. LONESOME WIFE.

A. I think the saddest thing about your letter is that you wish your letter published in order to carry your message of loneliness to your husband. It is tragic that man and wife can be such poles apart that they cannot even talk things over of so personal a nature.

But I have known men just like your husband appears to be, men who seem to retire in a shell as the years roll by, and who never emerge for any pleasant intimacies within the home circle.

Honestly I don't know what I would do with such a husband. I suppose I would have to take him as he is, just as you do. But I would surely try to arouse him.

How would I try? Well, for one thing I would try to have a really sincere, frank talk with him. It is hard to conduct a one-sided conversation but perhaps you could get it across to him just how lonely you are. Then I would try arousing him through congenial friends, have in quite a bit of company and try to win his enthusiasm for games of one sort or another. Then — even though you did beg me to leave this out—I would surely try the extended vacation plan. Many a man has learned how much he needs his wife through her absence. Maybe he wouldn't admit it. That would be unnecessary. But his attitude might alter considerably by the time you returned just the same.

Then, if all that failed, I would just scurry around and make the most interesting life possible for myself without his companionship. I would attend club meetings, find interesting, constructive things to do, make friends, and simply scour Lincoln for recreation and diversion.

Don't permit yourself to brood or mope. It's too bad, but it can't hurt you greatly if you keep your mind active, your body healthy, and your spirit gallant. And you do have that lovely daughter to keep young for, and with.

An Old Timer.

Dear Minerva: Your Mail well reflects the usual summer languor in its its paucity of letters from the good old timers or the bad old timers as doubtless some consider them, but then if we were all perfect the reformers would be out of a job and also out of mischief and they would pine away and little as I respect that class of people as a rule, I do not wish them any additional hard luck for they are unhappy enough already. There are misfortunes that one would not wish upon his enemies.

The reform bunch are a peculiar class of people; they are only happy when they are miserable and they are most happy when everybody else is miserable; like those strange paradoxes who weep for joy, that class of women who enjoy poor health because it gives them something to complain about and makes them the center of sympathy and solicitude of their friends and that class of people who fear that some calamity is about to come upon them if things run smoothly. I once worked for a man who was always nervous and uneasy if things were running all O. K. in h's office but who was always at his best when some little thing went wrong and he found something to fuss and fume and grumble about. Abnormal these creatures certainly are and a pest just the same as flies and wasps are a pest but nevertheless they are with us always as surely as morning, noon and night are ever with us in their season.

These are the halcyon days of the reform brigade. In the first place there never was so much easy money in the reform business as there is today or so much cheap notoriety; for example, Aimee Semple McPherson and many others. An abundance of kale and plenty of newspaper headlines are the prime requisites of the modern reformer; without them he could never get far and these days of short skirts, transparent dresses, rouged faces painted lips and powdered necks, cigarette smoking, joy rides, snappy literature, jazz dances, Sunday golf and ball games, home brew, etc., all help to keep our professional meddlers all keyed up, upon the jump from morning until night and delightfully miserable all the time, and very much of a novice is the reformer today who can not find at least a dozen things to squak about but this is not to be exclusively a discourse upon those wretched creatures; our friends (?) the reformers so I return to the subject first in hand: the good old Mail. What would we do without it? As the vacation season wanes and autumn comes once more with its shorter days and longer evenings I sincerely hope that the old guard as well as new friends will come to the column all pepped up by their summer vacations and that with well greased typewriters, carefully sharpened pencils or pens dipped in ink or vitrol or whatever is handy (hooch wouldn't be half bad) they will again freely give us their experiences and opinions and make the old page interesting as of yore.

Largely to let both friends and enemies know that I am still on deck and going strong and am not in the hospital or in jail as doubtless some of your readers wish me to be I offer the following contribution to your worthy columns and if it finds favor in thy sight, Oh editress, and comes into print I shall be deeply grateful and if this effusion comes to a sad end and finds its last resting place in thy ample waste paper basket as one or two of my former efforts have done I shall come to the conclusion that it merited the fate which befell it and that it was no better than its brother manuscripts were and I shall let it repose in peace with no ugly threats or "sassey" comments upon your inability to appreciate literary masterpieces (?) realizing full well that you are as you should be, the court of last resort, when it comes to your own department.

This admission that several of my "efforts" have found their way to the furnace room via the waste basket route should bring great gobs of joy to one of your readers and the fact that one so cordially hated as I, has received such treatment should be as a soothing balm to her troubled soul.

One sunny afternoon Jack and I stood on the great Poydras levee watching The Father of Waters rolling majestically towards the sea and all was sunshine and happiness and peace with never a thought of the pent up fury of the water God or how relentless and cruel the great river could be. Poor Dixie! She is hard hit today and it has occurred to me that if our restless reformers really want to do something worthwhile why don't they try and reform the Mississippi River? The vast sums of money squandered in this country upon Prohibition, anti-evolution campaigns, monkey trials, anti-Sunday golf crusades, anti-this and anti-thats has become a national disgrace and is a crime that we as a nation will be called severely to account for some day if we don't mend our ways and cultivate a little decency and common sense. If the millions wasted upon so-called reforms that have never accomplished anything except to make this country the crime center and the laughing stock of the whole civilized world were spent in dregging channels, straightening bends, building levees, etc., not only many human lives would be saved but the lives of much valuable live stock to say nothing of hundreds of homes and millions of dollars worth of valuable crops. That would be a reform of a constructive nature but our reformers for revenue are too selfish, too peanut-minded and too shallow to see it so they run around worrying themselves half sick over such trivial matters as the length of a woman's skirts, whether she wears them to her knees, a little below or a little above, whether people smoke a few cigarettes, whether a woman dabs a little powder on her face or

WOMEN APPROACHING MIDDLE AGE

Pass Through This Trying Period in Good Condition by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

MRS. HARVEY TUCKER
R. R. 9, SHELBYVILLE, IND.

"Grow old along with me, The best is yet to be"

With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grandchildren, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women of middle age, say they owe their vigor and health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Those who have learned through their own experience the merit of this dependable medicine are enthusiastic in recommending it to their friends and neighbors.

"I had been in bad condition for three months. I could not do my work. One day I read what your medicine had done and just had a feeling that it would help me, so I sent and got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had only taken half a bottle when I got up and started to do my work. It gave me an appetite, and helped me wonderfully. I can not praise this medicine highly enough. I surely will advise all women and girls to take it, and they don't have to use rouge to look healthy. My two daughters are taking it now and one is also using the Sanative Wash. I am willing to have you use this testimonial and I will answer letters from women asking about the medicine."—Mrs. Harvey Tucker, R. R. No. 9, Shelbyville, Indiana.

"I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the little books you give away and began to take the medicine. After the first few bottles I began to feel better and could eat better and had fewer headaches. I feel like a different person. At anytime that I don't feel good I take the Vegetable Compound again, as I always keep a bottle on hand. You may use this letter for every word is true. I will answer any letters sent to me."—Mrs. Jennie Bollerman, 611-11th St., Union City, N. J.

NEBRASKANS TO G. A. R. MEETING

Delegation Leaves Sunday for National Encampment.

Nebraska's delegation to the national G. A. R. encampment at Grand Rapids, Mich., during the coming week will start on their trip Sunday afternoon. The official headquarters car and one other sleeper, for which reservations have been made in Lincoln, will leave here at 4:45 p. m. attached to the Burlington train for Omaha and Chicago. At Omaha several more cars will be added.

Altogether 100 to 150 persons are expected to go from Nebraska to Grand Rapids. This will include officers and members of the G. A. R. and its various affiliated organizations, such as the W. R. C., the Sons of Union Veterans, and others.

Among those who will be in the party leaving Lincoln with the headquarters care are Department Commander David Bryson of Grand Island, State Adjutant Harmon Bross, and Past Department Commanders O. C. Bell and E. F. Brown of Lincoln and J. O. Moore of Milford.

The state office of the G. A. R. at the capitol will be closed until State Adjutant Bross returns.

The following statement was given out there in regard to the trip and the Grand Rapids encampment:

"Assistant Adj. Gen. Bross, the G. A. R. boys and allied organizations are on the eve of departure for Grand Rapids and wish to express their thanks and appreciation for the honest efforts of their friends who have facilitated all arrangements forthis encampment.

"When it was announced that Dayton could not accommodate the crowd, the transfer to Grand Rapids was made with so much ease nad comfort as to show the thorough organization of the national body. The Burlington railroad and its co-operative organizations made haste to perfect arrangements for transportation, and all Grand Rapids gives us to understand we shall have just as hearty a welcome as we had two years ago.

"Every delegate elected from the Nebraska department will be on hand for business sessions and the voting strength for the department will equal that of former years. It is interesting to notice how quickly daughters and granddaughters have adjusted their affairs so as to accompany some feeble comrades who need assistance.

"The number of comrades put forward as candidates for commander-in-chief shows there will be no lack of interest in the general affairs of the encampment.

"The headquarters car will run from Lincoln to Grand Rapids without charge, leaving Lincoln, Sept. 11, 4:45 p. m., arriving in Grand Rapids at 1:45 p. m. the next day."

Easier Ways To Lose Fat

Some can reduce by starvation or abnormal exercise, but the way is long and hard. Not one in ten of the over-fat has the patience to continue. And even then the best efforts may fail unless the inner cause is corrected.

Over twenty years ago scientific men discovered a great cause of excess fat. They found a substance which Nature employs to turn food into fuel and energy rather than into fat. They proved that an extra supply of that substance could check the formation of fat.

That substance was embodied in Marmola prescription tablets. People have used them for two decades—millions of boxes of them. Now you can see in almost every circle how much they have done for beauty, health and vitality. Doubtless some of your friends can tell you. Slenderness prevails today, fat is the exception.

The use of Marmola requires no abnormal exercise or diet, though moderation helps. Users simply take four tablets daily until the weight comes down to normal. They combat the cause.

Try the help which has done so much for so many. You owe that to yourself. You cannot afford to stay over-fat when reduction is so easy and so pleasant. Watch the results, then tell your friends as people have for 20 years been doing. All your life you will be glad that you know Marmola. Go order now.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. If your druggist is out, he will get them at once from his jobber.

Thousands Of Dollars Saved Through Farming And Gardening At State Institutions

BY HERBERT KELLY.

Watermelon was served Thursday evening to the 700 or more persons in the Nebraska state penitentiary for the first time this year.

Since it takes a big load of melons to feed the prisoners it is very doubtful if they would have received this dessert if the melons had not been produced in the prison gardens. At least melons could not be served twice a week from now until the end of the season if they had to be purchased by the state board of control.

The inmates of the penitentiary are not the only persons in state institutions who are being fed the delicacies. The same condition exists at the state hospital for the insane and at the state reformatory for men. In addition to unusually good garden truck, grapes and cherries in abundance have been produced at the state hospital. Lettuce, radishes and other small garden truck have been very good at the reformatory this year and melons are now beginning to be served.

Crops which greatly surpass those of the past two years are cause for rejoicing by the state board of control and by the inmates of the various state institutions. For the inmates better crops mean that the summer menu contains more vegetables and fruits and that more preserves and canned products will be served during the winter. Members of the board of control can smile because the increased production will bring about a lower per capita expense at the institutions.

The state penitentiary, state hospital and state reformatory for men are three of the largest gardeners in this vicinity. Last fiscal year, from June 1, 1926 to June 1, 1927, the value of farm and garden products raised at these three institutions was approximately $58,000. Nearly every crop suitable to this region was raised, including: wheat, corn, turnips, squash, melons, potatoes, peas, cucumbers, asparagus, rhubarb, tomatoes, kohlrabi, chard, cherries, spinach and beans.

Larger Yields.

This year the value of these products will be considerably above $58,000. At the penitentiary, where an irrigation system was installed last spring, some of the garden truck is yielding twice as heavy as last year. The cool weather and the abundant rainfall has helped garden crops at the other two institutions. In a year of bumper wheat and corn crops the value of these two products will be greatly increased.

The system of production is the same at the three institutions. Some of the land farmed is owned by the state and the remainder is rented. The steward appoints a gardener and a farm boss who are directly in charge of the work. Under these two men are gangs of inmates who work in the fields and help with the canning.

The problem of marketing the crops does not worry the officials of these institutions. The garden truck, fruit and berries are placed on the table while in season and the surplus canned for winter use. The field crops are used to feed the cattle, swine, horses and chickens at the institution.

Warden W. F. Fenton, who formerly lived on a farm, takes a great interest in the gardening and raising of field crops at the state penitentiary. The steward, W. A. Kirby, has the task of handling the produce grown, while the production end is in charge of a farm boss and a gardener.

Jack Congleton is the farm boss and L. L. Lawrence the gardener. Congleton is in charge of the growing of corn, wheat, oats, alfalfa and other field crops and of the nine or more teams of horses at the prison. Lawrence supervises all of the garden activities, the canning or other disposal of this produce, the dairying and raising of swine.

Trusties Work.

Both the farm boss and the gardener have a crew of "trusties" working under them. All of the prisoners are eager for the opportunity to leave confinement for the work in the fields. The "trusties" are selected by the warden or other prison officials on the basis of their record and willingness to work.

These prisoners receive no wages for their work but are granted two days "good time" each month. This time is deducted from their sentences. Some of the trusties work just as hard as laborers do who are being paid for their services but others occasionally need prodding, according to Mr. Lawrence. If the farm boss or the gardener finds that a man is continually laying down on the job all he needs to do is to report this to the warden and the prisoner goes back to the penitentiary.

A considerable number of prisoners are turned out for field work in the spring. They are mostly men whose sentences expire during the summer or fall so that the gang is a small one by winter. The few men left then need not lose their status as trusties but can split wood, care for the cattle and stock and do the other winter work. Very seldom does a prisoner take advantage of his privileges as a trusty. In the five years that Mr. Lawrence has been gardener at the prison only one man has escaped and that was this year.

The prisoners working for the gardener or farm boss put in an eight and a half hour day. In the mornnig they work from 7 o'clock to 11 o'clock and from 1 o'clock to 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon. Besides getting Sundays and holidays off they need not work on Saturday afternoons.

Just now the gardener's gang is engaged in canning tomatoes and making preserves. The tomato crop is unusually good this year due largely to the irrigation system which was installed this year.

Expect 1,500 Bushels.

About seven acres are planted to tomatoes and Mr. Lawrence estimates that the yield will be above 1,500 bushels. Some of these tomatoes are placed on the table while the rest of the crop is being prepared for winter use.

After one gang has picked the tomatoes they are hauled by the wagon load to a small shed west of the prison. Here the fruit is sorted, peeled and scalded by a gang of about seven men.

If preserves are to be made the tomatoes are then put into a fifty gallon steam cooker. The cooker is packed full and the fruit cooked down about three-fourths. The finished product is placed in five gallon crockery jugs which are made air tight with sealing wax. A "T" or a "Pi" placed on the jug tells whether it contains tomatoes or preserves.

About 200 bushels of tomatoes are being handled every day. Mr. Lawrence believes that between 1,800 and 2,000 gallons of the tomato preserves will be put up this year. Some of these preserves are the red tomato and others the yellow pear tomato preserves. The penitentiary product compares most favorably with commercial or home preserves and is greatly relished by the prisoners. The huge crop of tomatoes is cause for the prisoners to rejoice, as the steward and the gardener divide the preserves so that they are distributed, about equally throughout the year. This year the equal portions should be somewhat larger or more frequent than is usually the case.

Besides the preserves Mr. Lawrence estimates that there will be about 2,000 gallons of tomatoes, twenty barrels of piccalilli, twenty barrels of cucumber pickels, 250 to 300 gallons of ketchup, and seventy to seventy-five barrels of sauer kraut. The amount of kraut put up this year is more than usual as the cabbage yield was unusually good.

All of these products are stored in the stone cellar located on the hill south of the penitentiary. This cellar is equipped with a cement floor and ample facilities for storing. Produce is kept cool enough in summer not to spoil and will not freeze in the winter in this cellar.

Just how much better crops are this year than last at the penitentiary can not be definitely known until the end of the season. Mr. Lawrence, however, says that the cabbage and tomato yields will be at least twice what they were last year and that other garden crops are nearly as good in proportion.

Prospects for the field crops are also good. The wheat yield was about twenty-six bushels to the acre and the outlook is for a bumper corn crop. Oats and alfalfa were also good.

The farm boss, Jack Congleton is in charge of the men working these field crops. The corn, wheat and other products are used as feed for the cattle, horses and swine at the penitentiary.

Save $25,000.

In the last fiscal year of the penitentiary the taxpayers were saved about $25,000 because of the farming and gardening activities at this institution. The produce grown amounted to $18,319, the farm crops to $5,396 and fruit to $960.

The only fruit produced was 8,000 pounds of strawberries from three-fourths of an acre. The yield was valued at $960.

Work Helps Inmates.

Garden and farm crops as far harvested at the state hospital for the insane have been good and the prospects for crops yet standing are good. The system is about the same as at the penitentiary. A farm boss, U. S. Wochner, and a gardener, E. E. Colles, are directly in charge of inmates who work in the fields. Above the farm boss and gardener are the steward, J. R. Helms, and the superintendent, Dr. D. G. Griffiths.

In his last report Dr. Griffiths' states that "we regard industrial pursuits as one of our most potent therapeutic agents," so that working the inmates not only helps to lower the taxpayers' burden, but it also helps the condition of the persons confined at the hospital.

The total value of farm crops produced at the state hospital in the year ending June 30, 1927 was $16,931 and of the garden crops for the same period was $9,932. Favorable weather conditions should make the value of both much greater this year.

Steward Helms reports that the 200 acres of corn at the hospital is in "excellent condition." Wheat yielded about thirty bushels to the acre for eighty acres. The third crop of hay has just been cut and is fairly good.

The potato crop is yielding from seventy-five to eighty bushels to the acre compared to last year's fifty bushels to the acre. The tomato yield is also heavy this year.

Much of the produce grown at the state hospital is used on the tables at once, but a considerable amount is also canned or otherwise preserved for winter use. Nearly 500 bushels of grapes were produced and much of the yield converted to grape jelly. Three hundred gallons of tomatoes have already been canned. A little sweet corn is also canned and some of the cabbage is is made into sauer kraut. A good yield of cherries enabled the steward to preserve 450 quarts of this fruit for the winter.

From twelve to fourteen inmates work under the farm boss and gardener. Only one of these inmates is paid.

Value of Crops.

The state hospital report for the period from June 1, 1926 to June 1, 1927, shows the importance of the produce grown at this institution:

Better Outlook.

Superintendent A. W. Miller in his last biennial report on the state reformatory for men said that "crops especially garden truck were almost a complete failure" because of weather conditions. The following report on this seasons crops at the state reformatory reveals a much more cheerful condition:

Twenty acres of potatoes will average ninety bushels to the acre.

Much sweet corn was produced and 2,500 pounds of it was dried.

Melons are only fair.

Tomatoes are harvesting very well.

Two hundred bushels of onions will be secured from two acres.

Thirty-two acres of wheat, not yet threshed, will average thirty bushels to the acre.

The corn is late but the outlook very good. Sixty acres are planted.

Eight acres of navy beans have not yet been harvested. Condition fair.

Two acres of cabbage will be cut for kraut.

Three thousand pounds of cucumbers will be produced.

The carrots, parsnips and turnips were all good.

Fifty tons of alfalfa were harvested.

Ten tons of sugar beets were produced to be fed to cattle.

Five thousand quarts of string beans have been put up and tomatoes are now being canned. More beans will be put away for the winter and also a considerable amount of sauer kraut will be made.

Work Is Educational.

The farm boss at the reformatory is Captain H. W. Jespersen. Steve Clemens is gardener. The men who work under them spend half the day in the fields and the other half in some kind of an educational pursuit.

The field work too is "educational" to a certain extent, as Superintendent Miller indicates in his annual report. He says "we are endeavoring to have our industry a means to the end of reformation for the prisoner, who is to be restored to freedom and expected to be self-supporting and a respected member of society."

At the reformatory 65.64 acres of state land are in cultivated garden and 85 acres in farm crops. An additional 109 acres is also rented for the farm crops. The last report showed that farm machinery at the reformatory is valued at $1,163; a hot house at $250, a root cellar at $225 and a canning factory at $650 so it can be seen that the reformatory is one of the largest small truck farmers near Lincoln.

Cuts Expense.

Figures on the produce grown there for a two-year period prove that this year's production will help to materially decrease the per capita expense over the past biennium.

University Notes

Two former assistants in the geography department will teach this year. George E. Harding, granted a master's degree by the university in 1926, taught during the summer at the Sam Houston state teachers' college at Huntsville, Tex., and has gone to California, Pa., to become professor of geography at the Pennsylvania state teachers college. Leland S. Paine will continue to teach geography at the Illinois state teachers college, Normal, Ill., where he taught during the summer session.

Professor E. E. Lackey of the geography department spent the summer in Chicago. Miss Esther S. Anderson, instructor in that department, spent two weeks in Chicago visiting Mrs. Anne Stake, formerly an assistant at the university. While in Chicago Miss Anderson was asked to write an article on Nebraska for the World Book, an encyclopedia to be issued for use in grade schools.

Word from Dr. N. A. Bengtson, who is on an extended leave of absence from the university as professor of geology and geography, is that he is on his way to Venezuela where he will be engaged in economic-geographic problems until his return to the university in February.

Miss Phyllis Rice, assistant in the geography department, taught during the summer at Miami university, Oxford, O., and after a visit at Asheville, N. C., returned to her home at Nebraska City before continuing her work at the university. Melvina Waters, another assistant in the geography department, taught at the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville during the summer session.

Dr. B. C. Hendricks of the chemistry department was a representative at a meeting of the American Chemical society in Detroit September 5-9, and he read a paper, "The High School Chemistry Library," before the division of chemical education. Papers by William H. Adolph and H. G. Deming, two other members of the Nebraska chemistry department, were read.

Dr. William H. Adolph, who is to succeed C. S. Hamilton as professor of chemistry, has arrived in Lincoln. He lives at 2121 A street.

Frank A. Kidwell, in charge of supplies for the military department, was called to active duty under his reserve officers' commission of lieutenant colonel this summer, and for two weeks was placed in the office of the quartermaster general at Washington, D. C. Later, with Mrs. Kidwell, he visited his son and grandson at Governor's Island, N. Y.

The first annual 'freshman orientation camp" of the University of Nebraska Y. M. C. A. was held at Camp Strader at Crete, Neb., Thursday, Friday and Saturday. A score of beginning students at the university attended. The speakers were: Prof. C. H. Oldfather, whose talk was "Attitudes Toward University Education; Lloyd Marti, graduate of the College of law, "The Place of Activities in Student Life"; Prof H. C. Gossard of Nebraska Weslevan University, 'The 'Influence of New Scientifice Discoveries on Tnought of Today"; and F. C. Stevenson, state Y. M. C. A. secretary, "The Place of Religion in the Life of a Student."

The vacancy on the University of Nebraska athletic board caused by the absence on leave of Prof. R. D. Scott will not be filled, the chancellor's office announced Thursday. The present members of the board are L. F. Seaton, L. E. Gunderson, T. J. Thompson, Herbert D., Gish, and John K. Selleck for the faculty and Max Towle for the alumni. Professor Scott has a year's leave of absence from his duties in the English department.

Three new military officers will be among the instructors in the University of Nebraska military department when classes begin Thursday. They are Capt. Wallace W. Parker and Capt. Henry G. Lyon from the infantry school at Fort Benning, Ga., and Capt Raymond G. Lehman from the Thirtieth Infantry at Fort Andrews, Mass., Sgt. Edwin D. Schweig will come to the university from Creighton university, replacing Sgt. Frank C. Esenther. Colonel Frank F. Jewett, commandant of cadets, was on duty at the R. O. T. C., camp at Fort Crook during June and July, and visited in California while on leave during August. Captains, Foster, Hoss, and Skinner of the military department were on duty at the C. M. T. C., Fort Crook, and Captains Lyon and Parker at the C. M. T. C., at Fort Leavenworth. Besides his work in the military department, Captain Lehman will assist in coaching the freshman football team.

If miltiary training is a pill, then the University of Nebraska is doing its best to apply a sugar coating. For the tall, stiff, "stand up" collar of the R. O. T. C., uniform has gone, and this year even the lowest private in the ranks of university companies will wear a smart, rolled collar with a white shirt collar and black tie. Frank A. Kidwell, storekeeper for the military department, has had all the uniform coats—some 1,600 of them—retailored so the stiff collars are transformed into neat lapels. The first reason for the change was to make the uniforms more comfortable, but now that it has been done military officers think the apeparance of a university company will be improved fifty percent. Changes have also been made in the student officers' uniforms. These will be ordered in regulation army color, olive drab, instead of blue as heretofore.

From the cabbage field shown above and to the left much sauer kraut will be put up to be fed to inmates at the state penitentiary. The vineyard in the upper right picture, is at the state hospital for the insane and yielded heavily this year.

The lower left picture is of an onion field at the state penitentiary. Apparently enough onions are being produced to feed an army but the production will not be more than enough to feed the 700 inmates. The picture at the lower right was taken at the state hospital. The rows to the right are of egg plants and to the left of wonder berries.

Oxford More Tolerant But Has Disadvantages According To Tefft, Former Rhodes Scholar

Sheldon Tefft, former Rhodes scholar from Nebraska who has just returned from three years at Oxford university, thinks Oxford and its educational system has several advantages over the American plan, but he believes too that it has disadvantages.

Mr. Tefft, who was a student at the University of Nebraska and whose home was formerly at Weeping Water, has returned to the university to become an instructor in the college of law.

"Oxford is more liberal, more tolerant than American universities," he says. "There is no attitude that one must conform to a certain pattern, as there seems to be in American institutions. This is especially evident in the matter of dress. It seems to make little difference what you wear at Oxford, and certain men who would probably be considered 'bums' here have got on very well at Oxford.

"Under the English system of tutors and lectures the student has more freedom and the responsibility for his success is more his own than in America. In the Oxford environment, with its scholastic atmosphere, the student almost always turns to 'extra' reading which he would not be likely to do under other circumstances and the Oxford system allows him time to do this."

Read More in England.

As for the matter of "extra" reading, Mr. Tefft remarks, all of England appears to do much more of it than America. Even the shopgirls carry their books, which are not always cheap novels. On a trip to the northern part of England Mr. Tefft had occasion to stop overnight at a miner's home, and he was astonished to find a shelf of worthy books in the house.

But Oxford is not ideal. It is inferior in some ways to the American university. "One disadvantage" Mr. Tefft continues, "is the lack of class room discussion. Especially in the law school is this absence a drawback. for free discussion among the students of the class is helpful and important."

One thing an American student misses at Oxford is the ballyhoo and the publicity common to every American campus. Mr. Tefft never heard of a stunt like "pharmacy night," or "engineers' week," two features of the University of Nebraska annual program.

Athletics Much the Same.

The Oxford system of athletics, praised so often as superior to the American specialized teams, does not differ much, in reality, from the athletic plan in education institutions this side of the Atlantic according to Mr. Tefft. 'Indeed, the inter-varsity athletics are much the same as those in America, except that they are not given so much publicity and they are not looked upon as huge spectacles or gladiatorial contests. There are no professional coaches, although alumni sometimes assist in shaping a team. The teams themselves, of course, are just as select and as specialized as in America.

"Oxford students have the opportunity of entering inter-college athletics in all branches of sports. The college resembles a fraternity to a certain extent, although it is a large group of men and there is no secret retual and no claim of 'brotherhood' for the members. The inter-college athletics may be compared to intra-mural sports which are coming into use in most American universities."

Scholars Not Clannish.

The objection recently raised in the United States that Rhodes scholars at Oxford are "clannish" and do not enter into the life of the university is refuted by Mr. Tefft. "It is only natural that we should go together more or less, because we are old friends before we ever arrive in England. But there is no conscious attempt to set ourselves apart. The American club, which existed for a time and might have been an indication that Americans are 'clannish,' has disbanded simply because it was not supported by the Americans.

"The Rhodes scholar has no special place at Oxford and is just like any English student who is sent to school by his father or a relative. The Rhodes scholar is an ordinary student whose money is furnished by the Rhodes scholarship fund.

"There are traditions and ancient rules and regulations which might be considered restrictions upon Oxford students. The college gates close at 910 in the evening, and it requires payment of a fine, which is really a tip to the porter, to gain entrance after that hour. In the matter of dress there are certain traditions, too. Whenever he attends a lecture, visits his tutor, or calls on any university officer, the student must wear his long black gown. At examination time he wears cap and gown, black shoes, a dark suit, white collar and a white bow tie.

"But there is not attempt to manufacture traditions. These practices have come down from the past and every one takes them for granted, accepting them as a part of his life at the university."

NEW CHURCH TO HOLD SERVICES

Organization and Dedication Program at Hawthorne Methodist.

School Building Remodeled for Purposes of Congregation.

Organization and dedication services for the new Hawthorne Methodist Episcopal church at Forty-eighth and O streets were held Sunday morning. It was expected that approximately fifty men and women would be received as members. This group will form the nucleus around which the congregation will be built. Within a short time a "children's day" will be held and at that time the children will be received as members.

The church building was formerly the Hawthorne school. It was purchased from the Lincoln board of education when the new school was built in another location. The purchase was made possible through the aid of the Methodist city union. The building has been remodeled and it now has an auditorium which is capable of seating 250 persons. Five rooms are also available for the Sunday school.

Services and Sunday school have been held in the church for the last fifteen months but the actual organization is just now being formed. Rev. G. H. Main is pastor, W. M. Bryant is superintendent of the Sunday school, Gordon P. Lintt is director of music, and Mrs. N. W. Heller is pianist.

Following is the all day program that is being carried out in connection with the organization and dedication of the church:

Sunday School at 9:45.

General assembly in the church auditorium followed by class sessions. Classes for all ages from beginners to adults.

Morning Service at 10:45.

MINERVA'S MAIL

whether a man mixes up a bit of raisins and yeast or rides to the swimming pool in his bathing suit without muffling himself up in an overcoat on a hot summer day as he should be permtted to do. If some of these impure-minded old fossils could only cleanse their own minds first what a joy it would be.

I am cognizant of the fact that reforming the Mississippi river, building great irrgaton works, etc., would never give our murkey-minded reformers the delight they derive in trying to put us all in a straight jacket and robbing us of our liberty. Trying to keep some poor fellow who has been perched upon a bookkeepers stool in some dingy office all the week from getting into God's sunshine and enjoying a ball game on a Sunday afternoon and trying to prevent some poor girl who has stood behind a counter from eight until six and until nine o'clock on Saturday night all the week for just enough to keep body and soul together from enjoying some good music and a few moving pictures on a Sunday afternoon or evening is much more to their liking. That class of nuts don't know a constructive reform when they see one. It's enough to make a horse laugh.

Now that I am in the writing game I suppose I might just as well completely exhaust your stock of patience as to half way do it so I take the liberty of appending here some remarks about bachelors called forth by the letter of "A Young Bachelor" published Monday, May 23rd. Sorry I can not bring a new subject to The Mail but the bachelor subject is not exhausted yet besides we don't want too heavy a mental diet these warm, summer days any more than we want an overly heavy diet of foods. Too deep a subject might give us all "Mental indigestion" like a certain party whose illtimed, ill-natured, unwise letter put him in bad with the intelligent class of your readers last winter, and I am sure few, if any, of us want to emulate "That ludicrous old fossil." "A Young Bachelor" double crosses himself several times and among other things says he knows lots of bachelors young and old and he has never seen a happy bachelor yet. Evidently he is "young" and has much to see and to learn yet. He also told that he "Is hardly of age" and that he thinks "A bachelor leads a dog's life, especially when he farms" that "I hardly ever go to a dance or any place but still I am bumming almost every night." He would like "To see a young girl that would tackle an old bachelor" and I had hard work to keep from crying out loud as I read these pathetic lines: "If everything was my way and a little less law, I'd get married right away."

Too bad brother there is so much law and I agree with you that there is a super-abundance of it but that is easily settled. Go to a nearby state where the laws are less stringent (there are a numbr of them) and after the knot is tied both you and yours can return immediately and live happy ever after as the story books say; they will permit you to live here unmolested once you are married, they merely will not permit you to get the knot tied in this state under twenty-one without parental consent, but that is one law I am inclined to agree with and would be inclined to make it 31 instead of 21 if I had my way about it; by that time most men would know their minds better, be more settled and in most cases have some money to get married on. I also agree with you when you say that "A bachelor leads a dog's life especially when he farms." That's the kind of a life everyone leads on a farm or a ranch; I've spent several years on both and know by experience. I have known many a girl to marry a bachelor in his thirties, his forties or his fifties and consider herself, and really be, mighty lucky to get him. I find myself wondering where you "Go bumming most every night" when you say you "hardly ever go to a dance or any place." A rather queer life you seem to lead and I can not agree with Minerva's answer that "You should make some girl a very good husband." From the general tone of your letter I think she would have a little pepper pot on her hands and she has my sympathy. Perhaps I should not mention it but I remember that our editress once quoted President Wilson's famous statement that a man did not need to marry in order to find true happiness and experience a well balanced, well rounded and complete life, in answer to a letter written some ten years ago during war days.

There was a lot of loose and foolish talk in your department some time back about taxing bachelors and it is not difficult to locate the source of all that nonsense. For a number of years now our country has not only lost its revenue from liquor licenses but has spent millions of additional dollars trying to enforce an unpopular, unnecessary law. If we go to a show costing more than fifty cents we are taxed on the admission, if we buy an automobile we are taxed again. We are taxed from every direction until the whole country groans under the burden of taxation, and still the cry is ever for more and more money. The tax tyrants have levied a revenue upon almost everything in sight and they gloat with glee as they think they have discovered a new source of easy money. They have decided that the bachelor's pocket book is a pretty good place to rummage for it, hence the bachelor tax line of bunk.

If marriage is such a blissful state and being single is such a great misfortune as some people claim it is, then it looks as though the bachelors were being deprived of enough happiness; why torment the poor fish further by inflicting a tax upon them?

Some time ago I saw a cartoon in a trade paper published by a manufacturer in Birmingham, Alabama that surely hit the nail square on the head. It showed a wretched, little shanty above whose tottering chimney a stork carrying a new baby in its beak was hovering while a gaunt wolf clawed at the front door. Underneath the picture was the following words:

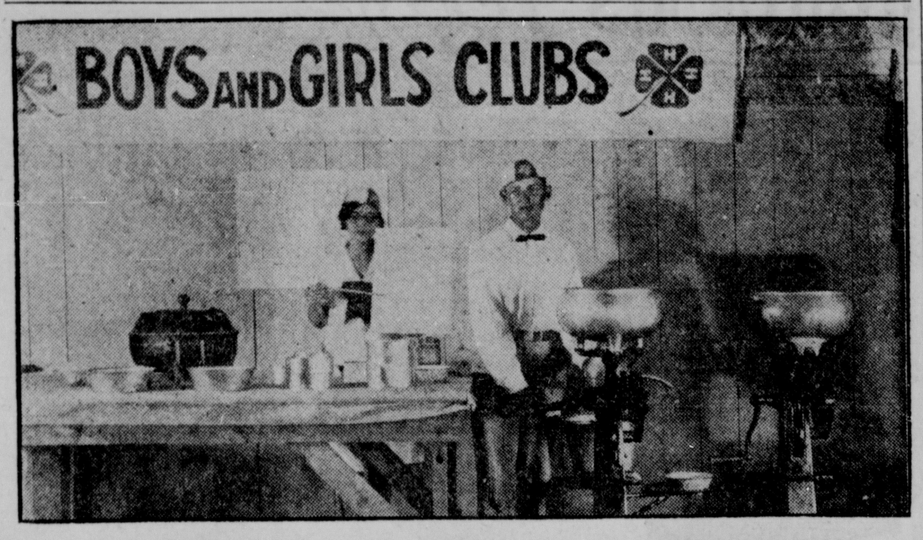

"Man has no monopoly on co-operation. The STORK and the WOLF usually work the same neighborhood."

Only recently a social worker of this city said that the number of men becoming discouraged because they were unable to provide for large families and deserting them was on the increase and that her observations showed that large families and large incomes rarely went together. There are crimes that no law can touch and having a large family and being unable to properly provide for it is one of the most prevalent and one of the worst I know of. I now one man who is the father of seven children who does not half way support his family yet he has none of the so-called vices; does not even smoke. I know of another with twelve youngsters and a visit from the bird above mentioned expected most any day. He does not own his own home and pays rent or attempts to; his family does not live, they can not live; they can hardly exist. Such things are a million times worse than smoking cigarettes, taking an occasionl drink or seeking a little harmless recreation on Sunday; they are pitiful in the extreme and this much can be said in favor of the bachelor; he is not adding to the world's already abundant supply of suffering, sorrow and misery, and instead of talking about penalizing him for paying his bills, minding his own busness and behaving himself as a bunch of ignorant, bigoted, narrow-minded meddlers, posing as reformers, would like to do; if anything, he ought to be commended and rewarded for being an asset instead of a liability to his community.

After all quality counts far more than quantity and from a recent issue of "The Valve World" I cull the following pertinent paragraphs: "Scientists have it figured that by the year 2000 the population of the United States will be 200,000,000; and that is just about the number that our land will support comfortable. Then what? asks the Scientific American. Semi-starvation and the resulting cessation of advance because everybody will be hard put to it to make a bare living? Do we want to be packed in like sardines? x x x What the world wants is happiness — not more population. There are two billion human beings already. Is that not enough? x x x Is there any special virtue in mere numbers — in multiplication? France, whom many think decadent because her population does not increase rapidly, has really found the secret. The French people are said to have learned, better than any other nation, how to live happily." The late war is still fresh in most of our memories; it was a product of overcrowded nations, and the idea that it is every person's duty to marry and have a young one every Saturday night is only held by that class of morons who have the distorted, warped ideas of life prevalent in insular communities. It is true that some who never marry would have done better had they married and it is equally true that many who marry should have remained single. Unfortunately we do not always find our proper niche in life which is one of life's greatest tragedies. Too many are swayed and stifled by the two by four outlook on life and atmosphere always prevalent among the narrow minded. Wonderful France! Her industrious, artistic, excellent people have found the true secret of happiness; they live and let live, plenty religious enough, yet not too religious, they do not in their own conceit set themselves up as greater and wiser than God Almighty, and seek to regulate the universe. They do not inflict upon themselves all sorts of unwise, happiness-destroying regulations but seek and find the good in life from day to day. It is really a sin to condemn and shun the pleasant and happy things of life which were put here for our use and for no other purpose and we should always remember that their abuse by the few can never be construed as an argument against their proper use by the many. Never. Life is a game and those who do not play it properly fall by the wayside and it is just as well that the undesirable element drop out; it always has been and always will be purely a case of the survival of the fittest. Lovely and wonderful La Belle France; with some of your blood coursing through my own veins, I doff my hat to you. ROGER.

A. It is with exceeding regret, that I ever use my editorial shears on a letter from either Jack or Roger. But grim necessity, lack of space, makes it sometimes imperative.

HASTINGS NOTES

Students of the college and the faculty gathered at the college gymnasium Saturday evening for the annual new students' reception which is sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. organizations. The social chairmen of these two bodies — Laurel Lewis, '29, Osceola, and Ellouise Mitchell, '29, Hastings —were in charge of the varied program of entertainment and get-acquainted stunts. A more informal gathering was held on Monday evening in honor of the new students.

Improvements on the campus made during the summer have made an obvious impression on those returning to school this week. A $5,000 addition, three stories in height, has been built on Domestic Science building; Alexander Hall dormitory has been renovated and the conservatory gievn another floor of space in the building; both Ringland and McCormick halls have been refinished inside and the latter re-roofed new lockers have been added to the gymnasium; a gravel street through the campus with congrete curbing now replaces the dirt thoroughfare.

Additions to the faculty this year place the total number of instructors now at thirty-eight with ten members new to the college. The new members are: Cecil Young, physical director; L. L. McKibben, social science; Hazel Van Tassell, English; R. W. Kretsinger, education; Lucille Reid, French; L. G. Pulver, economics; Hazel Furman, English; Horace Jones, violin; Gladys Nelson, voice; and Elizabeth O'Reilly, piano.

Among those introduced Wednesday at the first chapel services was Miles J. Martin, former professor of Physics at Hastings College, who with Mrs. Martin and their son, is visiting here. Mr. Martin is now completing work for a doctor's degree at the University of Wisconsin. Mrs. Martin was women's physical director at the college for a year.

Football interest is running high on the campus, fiftyfour men reporting to Coach Young for the first practice, and over half of them being experienced gridsters.

More distant points than ever before are represented this year by students who enrolled during the week. Some of those who came from great distances are: Americo del Castillo, Porto Rico; Roy Gerbain, James Russell and Eugene Dolan, Durango, Colo.; Daniel Weyer, Tacoma, Wash.; Wong Yen Shun, Canton, China; Valentine and Miss Sima Han, Manchuria; Ruth Lay, Sacaton, Ariz.

Recent communication between President Calvin H. French and Coach Paul J. Schissler of Oregon State college has assured the engagement of coaches Schissler and Knute K. Rockne, Notre Dame mentor, for one of their summer football coaching schools during the coming season. Rockne will handle classroom work and Schissler field work. While at Hastings these coaches will discuss individual problems in addition to the regular football work.

More orderly and systematic freshman initiations was agreed upon by upper classmen this week at a meeting led by Harold Hamil, president of the Students' Association of the college. All hauling into the country by either upper or lower classmen is limited to three miles and will cease immediately after a forty-five minute flag rush to be held next Tuesday afternoon on Hanson athletic field.

Horatio Farrar, graduate of the conservatory of music last year, sang a baritone solo at the first chapel of the year. He goes to Manhattan, Kas., State College of Agriculture, this year as instructor in voice.

William Tempel, who also graduated from the conservatory last year is now music instructor and chorus director in the Beatrice city schools.

Anthony J. Consbruck, football and basketball letter man here for the past four years, is athletic director this year in the high school at Gregory, S. D.

Grand Island College.

Herbert E. Hinton of Cincinnati, O., has been elected head of the department of public speaking at Grand Island college. In addition to his work in Public Speaking, he will act as coach of the debating team, teach one course in English and a course in religious education. Mr. Hinton is a graduate of Bates college, a college which put out the forensic champions of the college world in 1923. After taking his B.A. degree at Bates he spent three years in the Newton theological seminary from which institution he took his D.D. degree. He later specialized in education, receiving his M. A. in that department. He was than appointed as head of a boys' school in Burma where he has lived for a number of years. The ill health of his wife has made it necessary for him to remain for a time in the United States. His appointment completes the faculty for the year 1927-28.

A complete list of the faculty and administrative officers of the college is as follows:

Doane Notes

So many changes have been made in the buildings that it is doubtful if all of them will be completed before school opens. The work in Gaylord hall will be finished in time for the young women. New beds, mattresses, and dressers have been placed in each room. The conservatory of music will hardly be ready due to the changes being made for the new pipe organ. Room for the pipes is being made in three sections of the building. Many of the practice rooms have been remodeled and hallways changed. The chapel, however, will be ready for regular services Monday morning at 9:35, although the students will have to use the west instead of the east entrance.

Miss June Judy, B. A., Mus. B., who will instruct in pipe organ and piano at Doane this year, received her bachelor of music degree with major in pipe organ, also a teacher's certificate in piano in June, 1923, from Kansas University School of Fine Arts. She assisted in the history of music department under C. S. Skilton. In 1925 she received a bachelor of arts degree from Kansas university with major in English.

Miss Judy was church organist during five years at Kansas university in various churches of the city including the Congregational, Methodist, and Baptist. She studied piano with Professor Anna Sweeney and Prof. Carl Preyer, also the piano normal course with Louis Victor Saar, of Chicago, in the summer of 1923. Her organ training has been with Professor Charles S. Skilton.

Miss Judy spent the summer of 1925 in Europe in travel and study. She taught piano and organ privately five years and in 1926-27 taught organ, piano, and public school music at Huntley, Illinois.

Miss Judy took an active part in Kansas university campus life and was one of six in her senior year voted as largest contributors to the life of the university. She was very highly recommended by Mr. Skilton, nationally known composer and professor of theory, organ and history of music at Kansas university. Miss Judy is taking the place on the music staff left by Miss McNary.

CLAY COUNTY DRILL TEAM

BY LULU MAE COE.

It was home, sweet home Friday and Saturday for members of the boys' and girls' clubs.

The youngsters, who had spent a week at the Nebraska state fair, weren't suffering from exaggerated cases of homesickness, but they had so many things to show the folks in those homes. They liked the swimming pools and the bright lights and the crowds, but they were all ready to go back with their trophies under their arms.

Weighed down with red and blue ribbons and awards, the boys and girls have gone. Proud of the showing their cattle and chickens and corn had made through their own months of hard work, the champions are eager to try for prizes another year and those who entered and failed to make the grade have gone home determined to work harder to be on top in next year's show.

Nebraska has solved the problem of the present generation in the rural communities and small towns through its boys and girls club. When 9,000 youngsters between ten and eighteen years old are engaged in hog raising, watching the effect of certain feed on certain calves, learning to make a straight seam, or canning carrots and cabbages, they don't have time to indulge in the so-called modern mischief.

When one has a date at 5 o'clock with one's favorite cow, one doesn't spend the night in the manner of a flaming youth. Long hours of attending one's best porker's pain or of baking huge loaves of bread and putting up jelly leaves little interest in devising ways of becoming a parental problem.

Keeping 'em on the Farm.

With the club manner of giving the boys and girls an active interest in the farm, it is not going to be difficult to keep them there. Because a share of its profits are theirs, they are getting keen enjoyment out of it, and when the day of choice comes, they aren't going to hear the siren call of the city. They will know what they want to do, because they have been learning the modern, progressive manner of farming for ten or a dozen years.

Even though they couldn't all take home ribbons, all the boys and girls who came to the fair are champions. They have tended their beeves when it would have been more fun to play, they have pitted cherries for canning when they hated its monotony and messiness and would have preferred to read, they have regulated their lives to the problems they have undertaken, and not one has shirked or given up.

Francis Reichert, the engaging ten-year-old who carried off the grand championship, brought 'Doc' from Imperial, where he had fed him since the first of November. The Angus, a June calf of a year ago, is said to be the best baby beef ever to take a grand championship among the boys' and girls' calves.

Francis is a champion himself. In spite of his age, he has fed and exercised "Doc" as regularly as clock work. Nothing has interfered with the Angus' care, and Francis is going home to Imperial with $492 in his purse.

"Doc" was purchased from Dr. Fred Hoffmeister and Son, Angus breeders, on October 26, and from that time until January 15, was fed experimentally. Francis finally fed him barley and corn first until June, and then oats. July brought a return to barley, and in the meantime "Doc" had some cottonseed meal and alfalfa.

More Than Doubled Weight.

At the time of purchase, he only weighed 500 pounds and at the fair his weight was 1040 pounds. "Doc" cost $40 in purchase price and $155 in feed and labor. He sold for 47½ cents per pound, a new record price for Nebraska.

The calf of this youngest active member of his club brought him all sorts of honors. At the Chase county fair, he took first for the calf and second for the club, and at the Nebraska fair first in the junior Angus division, Angus championship, grand championship, and fifth in the showman's contest. All sorts of minor awards and trophies will follow in his wake from the fair, from Angus breeders and others interested.

Although it is a long journey from Imperial and a difficult task to get the calves ready, the boys, including Francis, are planning on coming next year. At that time, Frenchman Valley is planning to send a team composed of boys and girls from four towns, Imperial, Wauneta, Palisade and Culbertson. Corwin Mead, former club boy and university graduate, is the enthusiastic leader of the club.

"Cyclone" had more red and blue ribbons hanging above his stall than did any other calf. At the state fair he was first in his class of Herefords, champion Hereford in the baby beef club, first in his class and champion Hereford in the open class, and reserve champion of the boys' and girls' clubs. Previously at the Dawson county fair, he had placed first of the Herefords.

Dale Anderson of Lexington raised and trained "Cyclone," who is a wicked looking calf. The calf would have placed higher in the showmen's contest, where he placed seventh, if he hadn't had a dirty neck. Dale forgot to wash his calf's neck, even though he marcelled and curled him.

Buying the calf from his father for $30 November 1, Dale started to feed him regularly a month later, and has continued since that time. He has increased from 410 to 960 pounds between the time of purchase, when he was seven months old, and the present, when he is one year and four months of age.

"Cyclone" has had a variety of food. Corn and alfalfa constituted his diet until March 1, when Dale gave him Kearney special, oil meal, and ground barley for the last six weeks. Barley was rather difficult to get in Dawson county this year, and so he fed it but for a short time.

Dale has figured that his feed cost him $60. Selling at 20 cents per pound and with the premiums he made, the lad will have a net profit of $285.

The winner of the reserve championship—the reserve ranks second to the grand championship — is eleven years old, so that this is the year of youthful youth. This is his second year of feeding, and Dale is inspired to come again another year.

Clay County attracted attention at the fair, not only by its drill team, but by its excellent record. The boys had their first beef work last year, with ten members in the club. This year the county club has twenty-three members, nineteen boys and four girls, who fed thirty calves. Of that number, thirteen had no previous experience in feeding baby beeves.

So enthusiastic is Bruce Russell, the leader, that he arranged alternate trips and meetings for his club members. Three times during the season they drove ninety-six miles, covering a circuit of three towns. In that fashion every boy and girl in the club saw the feeding and progress of every other member of the club.

Clay county is not a beef county, but all seven head shown at the fair were bred and raised in the county. The others came from a neighboring county. The county also sent a baby beef demonstration and live stock judging teams.

Drilled With Boxes.

For the last month, Mr. Russell has been rehearsing his drill team. The boys and girls brought their white boxes, painted with the green 4-H club clover and the name of the owner. For the drill, they were piled pyramid fashion, with a youngster on each one, and five Herefords and owners on each side. The boy on the top box unfurled a banner, with the slogan, "4-H Club Work Builds Character." The members gave their drill previous to the baby beef show.

Every boy and girl in the club attended the exposition, and LeVern Gingrich of Clay brought the first place Shorthorn in Division B and the reserve champion Shorthorn. "Shorty" also placed second in the open class as a junior yearling calf and was a member of the county group that placed second and Shorthorn group making third. He was champion Shorthorn at the Nuckolls and Adams county fairs.

LeVern kept detailed records of his Shorthorn, and he found that he made $154, including premiums he took at all fairs. In the sale he brought $21.50 per hundred, or $206.40 for his 960 pounds. During the months LeVern has had him, he gained 2 1-2 pounds per day, or 660 pounds, weighing 300 pounds at the time of trading.

"Shorty" is a purebred from the herd of T. E. Troubaugh. He bred the first three sires of "Shorty" and the Shorthorn traces six times to Choice Goods, one of the most famous Shorthorn bulls, an imported animal. LeVern traded one of his calves for "Shorty," who was valued at $27 at five months. He is one year and three months old now.

During the 328 days, LeVern fed him, his gain cost 10½ cents per pound. For his earlier feeding, LeVern gave the Shorthorn a mixture of corn and barley with oil meal and molasses mixed up and ground in. During the last sixty or eighty days, the corn ration was cut to one-third, and ground barley was substituted. Among other foods, "Shorty" consumed 2,800 pounds of corn, 30 pounds oats, 60 pounds oil meal, 960 pounds barley, and 435 pounds of molasses feed at a total feed cost of $70.62.

Came On Own Initiative.

"Shorty" will have an honorable, if bitter end. The university purchased him for the annual Farmers' Family fun feed next winter.

Eleanor Dixon, the attractive 15-year-old girl from Blair who

KING OF THE CORN BELT

How many Nebraskans have given thought to the truly remarkable agricultural record made by this state in 1927?

Production of vast quantities of grain excite no wonder in Nebraska. Year after year over the last three decades, we have been harvesting a corn crop which averages 200,000,000 bushels, nearly 45,000,000 bushels of winter and spring wheat and 50,000,000 bushels of oats. Iowa and Illinois have usually topped us in corn. Kansas ordinarily raises much more wheat. Nebraska yields to Iowa and to Illinois for leadership in oats. But when it comes to a well-balanced agriculture what state can compare to this prairie commonwealth?

The September 1, estimate of the federal bureau of crop estimates, rates Nebraska corn at 85 percent of a perfect crop, excelled only in condition by Kansas with 91, but with an infinitely smaller acreage than will be harvested in this state. The condition of the crop at this time, but a few weeks from maturity, indicates a yield of 261,000,000 bushels, excelled only by that amazing crop of 272,000,000 bushels in 1896 thirty-one years ago, when practically the only grain planted in Nebraska was corn, which sold for 10 cents a bushel, and which was difficult to market at that price.

Privately A. E. Anderson, the federal crop statistician, admits Nebraska's crop may reach 300,000,000 bushels, providing ideal conditions prevail during the next three weeks. Those ideal conditions call for an absence of frost, no excess of moisture, and fairly warm, drying weather. There is then the assurance that Nebraska's 1927 corn yield will smash all production records just as wheat set a new high mark earlier in the season. There is at this time a practical certainty the crop will be the second largest on record. It will be the second largest raised in the nation, topped only by Iowa, and nearly 100,000,000 bushels larger than Illinois, which usually occupies second place.

Have we stopped between breaths to take inventory?

Final estimates upon the wheat crop in Nebraska in 1927 reveal a production of more than 75,500,000 bushels, which was sold for an average of $1.17 a bushel, or enriched the farmers of the state $88,528,000. Only under the abnormal and artificial conditions in the closing years of the war has wheat brought more money to Nebraska. In 1919 the state raised 60,675,000 bushels, or 15,000,000 bushels less than in 1927, but the crop was sold to famished Europe for an average price of $2.02 a bushel, or $122,564,000. Nebraska's 1927 wheat crop was twice as large and brought in nearly twice as much money as it did in 1926. With the sole exception of that brief war period, it was approximately 20,000,000 bushels greater, and worth $25,000,000 more than any other wheat crop on record.

We have raised larger crops of oats than was harvested in Nebraska in 1927. Oats is not a money-producing crop, however. Most of the crop is fed on the farm. We raised more than 50,000,000 bushels this year. We raised the largest crops of barley and rye ever harvested in this state. We raised more flax ethan ever before. We harvested one of our largest crops of potatoes, which especially in the western counties, has become a most important and profitable industry. The sugar beet production in the western irrigated counties will give Nebraska its greatest production, and at the same time entitle her to second rank, excelled only by Colorado, as a sugar beet producing state. We raised more fruit, more garden produce, more hay, both wild and tame, than we have in recent years

And now on top of this exceptional record comes assurance that the 1927 corn crop will be the second largest on record in this state, and under the most favorable condtions may smash all previous marks. It will be the second largest crop raised in the United States in 1927.

That, we submit, is a record which should arouse deep pride.

Other states, devoted almost entirely to a single crop, may top Nebraska in that particular grain. There is no state in the entire corn belt, however, which produces such a volume of all kinds of grain.

The farms of Nebraska will this season create more than three-quarters of a billion dollars of new wealth.

We have traveled a rough and stony road. The conditions which confronted us a year ago were discouraging and distressing but 1927 has more than made all losses good. Out of the golden stream which has been pouring into the state since the first wheat was threshed, and which will continue uninterrupted throughout the rest of the year, farmers are paying their obligations at the bank, adding to their equipment and their livestock upon the farms, and fortifying themselves to put agriculture upon an even more substantial and impregnable position. Conditions are certain to continue to improve. It is difficult to survey the nation and discover a people more fortunate and more favored than Nebraska. Certainly there is no commonwealth in the corn belt to challenge Nebraska's leadership in aggregate grain production in 1927. Literally the state is king of the corn belt.

THE YOUNGSTERS PAY THE BILL.

While "Big Bill" Thompson is traveling over the country in the interest of a flood control program, the results of his campaign against "George III" became more apparent with the opening of the Chicago schools.

More than 450,000 boys and girls took their seats in the classrooms without anyone in actual authority as superintendent of the schools, William McAndrew having been suspended by the Thompson satellites. More than 45,000 of these youngsters were crowded into temporary buildings, owing to crowded conditions, while 12,000 teachers were in a quandary as to whether the regulations laid down by Mr. McAndrew or the plan outlined by the Thompson school board should govern their work in the school room.

Chicago is again reaping the fruits of political interference with the schools.

Its fathers and mothers voted for what it is getting but it is most unfortunate that the boys and the girls are required to foot the bill. They will suffer most as a result of the chaos and confusion which has arisen.

THE VARYING BURDEN.

The white man's burden varies in weight according to the location in which he finds himself. About fifteen years ago John D. Rockeller made a gift of a million dollars to aid in the cure and prevention of the hookworm disease, and now the Rockefeller foundation announces that the malady has been practically eradicated in the United States and that it is under control in most parts of the world. About eleven million persons have been cured of the disease and restored to something like normal capacity.

Those who have been engaged in the task of eradicating the hook worm have had little trouble in persuading afflicted ones and those who might be attacked by the parasite in the United States or other parts of the western hemisphere to follow directions and thus aid in the campaign against the "lazy sickness," which had reduced vitality and had greatly increased the death rate. The same is true in regard to the fight which has been made on malaria in this part of the world. The people have for the most part co-operated and the battle has been won.

In India, however, the British are hindered and combatted in every effort made by them to improve sanitary conditions and eradicate or prevent disease. The consequence is that in Madras more than 80 per cent of the population has hookworm and similar conditions prevail in other places. Malaria and plague are ever present and in some cities where men have been hired to kill the diseased rats which carry plague they have been murdered by mobs which object to the taking of the lives of even these dangerous animals. Malaria flourishes because sanitary inspectors are not admitted to the breeding places of the mosquitos.

The Indians are religious fanatics, densely ignorant and deeply prejudiced. Hundreds of thousands each year drink the liquid sewage of the Ganges at Benares, returning home to infect others with cholera, typhoid and other maladies. The main water supply of many villages consists of stagnant pools, most of which are polluted.

Efforts to improve social conditions are blocked by the fact that most of the Indians are fatalists, believing that all of the events of life are merely illusions and should be experienced in a detached frame of mind. They believe that what they are fated to receive they will receive and that to endeavor to change things is wrong.

Under such conditions the white man's burden is an extremely heavy one.

SPEAKING IN RIDDLES.

Former Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes, back from Europe, says he believes President Coolidge will be renominated and re-elected.

Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury, and probably the closest advisor of the president in the cabinet, says he thinks Mr. Hughes could be prevailed upon to take the nomination and would be elected. Strange talk for an intimate of the president if Mr. Coolidge has an intention of putting a back-hand twist to his utterance that he "does not choose to run." Most extraordinary in Mr. Hughes to suggest that the president was spoofing when he issued his now justly famous New England colloquialism.

Of course Mr. Hughes is modest.

It would not have been seemly if it were to appear that he was reaching out for the nomination. So he plays the sensible game by directing the spotlight in another direction.

The most significant feature of the Hughes' return is the Mellon statement endorsing the former secretary of State. All along the public has been beguiled into the belief the heir-apparent was Herbert Hoover. Now Mr. Mellon is generally credited with being as close to Mr. Coolidge, and of knowing the president's mind as well as Mr. Hoover. The Mellon statement would lend color to the rumor that Mr. Coolidge was not altogether pleased with his secretary of commerce, and that there was actually a rift between Coolidge and Hoover.

A GOLD MEDAL AWARD.

Major Philip F. Coghlan, a printer, employed by the St. Louis Post Dispatch, was recently given the gold medal award of the Graphic Arts exposition. Mr. Coghlan is still active, at 95 years of age, and reports every day for duty at the case.

There are few men in America who have been privileged to watch the great strides which journalism has made in a larger degree than Major Coghlan. He has been an active printer by trade for 79 years, which is nine years more than the normal span of life granted to man.

But his life's activities have been during that period when printing became a science; when the most remarkable inventions and improvements in machinery have been productive of marvelous results. Major Coghlan became an apprenticed printer in 1852. There was not a paper published in Nebraska at that date. The great newspaper upon which he has served forty-four of the seventy-nine years was in its infancy under the able direction of one of the greatest journalists which America has produced, Joseph Pulitzer. All type was set by hand, and there was very little variation in it. The printing presses were in their infancy, with the experimental stage of the huge rotary presses, which print thousands of copies of great newspapers in a short time, just opening.

Since Major Coghlan started as an apprentice, printing has been completely revolutionized. Hand composition is becoming a forgotten art. Machines which are capable of producing a much greater volume, have come into almost universal use in the newspaper and printing establishments. Presses which will insure much better workmanship and which represent a most remarkable saving in time have taken the place of the flat-bed and the old Washington hand press.

But the greatest change which taken place is the care and attention given to the exact science of printing. Newspapers and periodicals were so scarce in those days no one gave a second thought to whether the type was clear and distinct and readable without great effort. Now every newspaper strives for individuality in printing. It wants the letters to stand out clearly and distinctly. In the larger cities the science has reached a point where special type designs are employed to supply individuality to the various departments of news.

The first illustration ever used in a newspaper made its appearance about the same year that Major Coghlan became an apprentice. It was a chalk plate, long since abandoned for better processes of engraving, depicting the destruction of a fire in New York city. Now there are processes by which newspaper illustration can be made nearly as satisfactory as the photograph.

Journalism has made a splendid advance in 79 years on the printing side of the ledger.

Has the reader kept pace? Does he read as carefully and as studiously as the reader did with the crude product of a half century ago? Probably he is better informed because the newspaper is designed to permit him to secure the same results with much less effort in reading.

Will's Appointment to Congress.

BY WILL ROGERS.

He couldn't find Rumania.

This is an apointment I received at a public reception given at the Auditorium in Washington, D. C., by the National Press club of Washington composed of all the political writers from all the various papers in America.

Now this is an awful good speech, better than anything I could write you; also the one from Senator Ashurst which I want to give you later. While the speech is good it was the poorest appointment I ever got. General Pershing and Secretary Hoover were the principal witnesses of my innaugaration.

Yours,
WILL.

Louis Ludlow, President National Press Club, said:

Ladies and gentlemen:

Well, all I know is just what I read in the papers. Recently I read in the papers that Will Rogers had been separated from the mayoralty of Beverly and was contemplating the future in a woe-begone "Where do we go from here?" frame of mind.

That piece in the papers instantly aroused the sympathy of the National Press club. Long ago—and I measure my words when I say it—we members of the National Press club learned that there are no finer people in the world than Mr. and Mrs. Will Rogers—especially Mrs. Rogers. We took down our battered copy of the United States constitution and read Article X, bearing directly upon this situation, which article states that the federal government is to exercise only such powers as are reserved to it in the constitution.

We put a committee of eminent lawyer-members of the Press club at work on that article, composed of Harvey D. Jacobs, Frank J. Hogan and Jerry A. Mathews, and after subjecting the article to the third linguistic degree and exercising their facile construing powers those constitusharps reported back that, in the meaning of the constitution of the United States, all powers not expressly reserved to the Federal government are to be exercised by the National Press club. This gave us the leeway we needed to take care of Mr. Rogers.

So we set about to find a job for him. Our first thought was to back him for the vice-presidential nomination on a Coolidge-Rogers ticket. Our idea was that Will would represent noise and the president would stand for silence. The president could throw the lariat and Will could throw the bull, and it would make a well-balanced ticket. Just when we had that all arranged the president "chose" to renig, and Will's vice-presidential prospects went blooey. We knew that we could not hook up Will with any other presidential candidate, because that would make a ticke that would be overloaded with noise.

This rebuff from the president only made us all the more determined to recognize the distinguished public services which Mr. Rogers rendered the mayoralty of Beverly by finding some way to promote him upward. We did not at all indorse the action of Beverly in giving him the air. We believed then, and we still believe, that his administration as mayor of Beverly, California, has done more than any other factor to make America a great and strong nation. I say this despite the fact that we have not always approved his foreign policy. His assertion that he did not visit Queen Marie of Rumania when he was in Europe because he could not find her country struck some of us as a grave diplomatic error which, in the case of a high-strung monarch, might have been provocative of war. But we liked the way he buddied with Mussolini, because that insures force will be on our side in the event of another war and with Mussolini backing us we shall be able to hit with a stiff punch.

So, in spite of the weaknesses of his foreign policy, we approved Mayor Rogers—approved him tremendously. Finally, an idea came to us like an inspiration and we grabbed it. It occurred to us that a good many states of this union have congress-men-at-large, but there is no congressman-at-large, for the entire nation. Exercising our clearly defined constitutional prerogative under Article X, we have decided to appoint Mr. Rogers congressman-at-large for the United States of America, his duties being to roam over the country, pry into the state of the union, check up on prohibition enforcement and report at regular intervals to the National Press club.

We are happy to state to Mr. Rogers tonight that this new office, upon which he is about to enter, is not without its material rewards and that it automatically carries with it a suspended salary of one dollar per annum.

In the name of the National Press club I now confer upon Mr. Rogers his commission as congressman-at-large from the United States, which reads as follows:

Know all ye men by these presents:

Whereas, Mr. Rogers has served with distinction as unofficial ambassador, without portofolio, and

Whereas, his service as mayor of Beverly, California, has added another scintillating page to American history, and

Whereas, Mr. Rogers, being at present without official connection, is in the status, as he has carefully explained, of "a good man looking for something better"; now, therefore

Be it resolved, that the National Press club, recognizing superlative statesmanship when it sees it and believing that the country's greatest need is not a good five-cent cigard but a Congressman Will Rogers, hereby appoints the said Hon. Will Rogers congressman-at-large for the United States of America, effective immediately, his tenure to continue during good behavior.

Done at the Club's Headquarters under its official seal this, the Twenty Seventh Day of August in the year of Our Lord, Nineteen Hundred and Twenty Seven.

(Signed) Louis Ludlow, president
W. H. Atkins, secretary.
Emmet Daugherty, chairman board of governors.

We are fortunate in having with us tonight two men who, the historians inform us, were cowpunchers together in the long ago, Mr. Rogers and the silver-tongued senator from Arizona, Henry F. Ashurst. I have not had time to investigate just what the historians mean by that statement. I could not say of my own knowledge at this moment whether they punched cows at the same time, or whether they punched the same cows, but I hope this point will be cleared up before the night is over. Knowing the brilliancy and caliber of Senator Ashurst and Congressman-elect Rogers I am prompted to make the suggestion that it would be a good thing for the country if more of our statesmen came to the capitol by way of the corral.

And now it is my pleasure to present to this immense uadience Senator Ashurst who, in turn, will introduce his fellow congressman and associate cow-puncher, Mr. Rogers.

HERE and THERE

The Last Word of 1868.

(New York Herald Tribune.

August, of course, is the indispensable month in which fall and winter fashions are revealed to a hushed world which has been awaiting the word ever since spring's newest idea marched out on mannequins. We learn now that we may expect a swirl brought back, an inch added, a fabric "emphasized," a color so old that it is new, like chartreuse, revived—but no cumbrousness, novel as that would be. Women will no longer tolerate it, even for a change. Against repeated attacks of the old oppressive order they have held on to what they are convinced is a sensible, scanty, abiding mode. It is scarcely an age since 1868, yet how far the conception of "sensible" winter dress has shrunk in the years between that sociable period and this!

New Hampshire has been chuckling over a fashion note discovered in a copy of "the Suncook Valley Times" of that date. The season's styles emerged considerably later, then, for seamstresses and dressmakers "sewed round" and could not be hurried. So the paper proposes as a timely topic for December, "How shall our girls be dressed in winter?" There is no doubt in the minds of the Suncook Valley haute couture: "In the first place, make a waist of canton flannel. Let the sleeves be long."

To this underwear of the same material, "to reach the top of the bootee," was added; then flannel garments made in the same manner but buttoned just below the knee. Next came the hoops, if chic demanded—"but girls are much better off without them"—and over these a warm, light skirt. Last, the dress, "which should be of a woolen material, made with long sleeves, and the waist and sleeves lined with strong cotton." Sturdy boots with heavy soles and thick woolen stockings completed the snug ensemble for the house, but "when she goes pout she should add a warm sacque and mittens." Mark Twain complained that nobody ever did anything about the weather, but it will be observed that as soon as woman began to ignore the old-fashioned winter it went away.

A Wild Boy.

(Chicago Journal of Commerce.)

A remarkable story comes up from South Africa of a native boy taken by baboons in babyhood from his kraal and cared for by a baboon foster-mother for years. Some twenty-odd years ago he was captured from a troop of baboons by Cape police on an expedition through wild territory. They were amazed to find, instead of a baboon, a well-grown boy who traveled on all fours. He scratched and bit and fought when taken, and was, of course, naked. His parents could not be located, so he was given a year in a mental hospital and then turned over to a farmer. He could not talk, disliked all kinds of cooked food, and lived on prickly pears and mealies. His appetite was enormous. In disposition he was mischevous, but not malicious.

It was a task to train him to walk erect, but he responded to kind treatment and was very fond of children. As the years passed he learned to talk. His mannerisms are all monkeyish and physically he is extraordinarily strong. He will run a ten-mile errand without a rest, can shoulder a 200-pound sack and carry it, and will do as much work in a day as two men. He remembers much of his experience with the baboons and tells of cold nights when he slept warm in the arms of a big baboon, and fed on edible crickets. He has learned to laugh—shrilly—and his features are similar to those of the baboons.

One thing is peculiar about him. He has no sense of time. Day and night mean nothing to him. To tell him to do something "in the morning" or in an hour conveys no idea to him. It is now or never in all his activities. But he has no disposition to go back to the baboons of his boyhood.

The Bridal Orange Blossoms.

(Tibbits, London.)

Miss Vioette Cordery, who just has returned to London from a 10,000-mile world tour by motor car, is the latest recruit to the band of British women who have made history in recent years.

Not so long ago men said: "Woman's place is the home," and meant it. And women, with a very few exceptions, accepted the ruling. They were labeled "Fragile, with care," and lived up to the label. If they had to go on a train journey alone, they were solemnly placed in the care of the conductor.

Today, some of the best known explorers are women. Lady Richmond Brown, Miss Rosita Forbes and others have penetrated into lands where very few white men would care to go.

The pessimists who think the twentieth century a dull, prossaic age should study the lives of some of these women. One especially may be recommended to them—that of Gertrude Lowthian Bell, who died a year ago at Bagdad, and whose letters are shortly to be published.

Eminent critics declare that they will create as great a literary sensation as Colonel Lawrence's famous book. Certainly Miss Bell's career was just as romantic as that of the "Uncrowned King of Arabia." She knew the east, as no other woman has ever known it. Indeed, the success of Lawrence's great enterprise in the war has been ascribed very largely to the information gained by Miss Bell on an adventuresome journey into Central Arabia just before the outbreak of hostilities.

This journey was carried out in spite of opposition by both the British and Ottoman governments, and is the only one that has ever been made in these regions by a white woman unaccompanied by any other European. In the course of it she was for some time kept in semi-captivity in the Wahabi city of Hail, to which no European has penetrated since.

Swift Justice, Less Crime.

(Kansas City Times.)

Monday night a man robbed a filling station in Kansas City. He was arrested shortly afterward, and the next day, Tuesday, was brought to trial in Judge Ben Terte's court. He was given a sentence of ten years in the penitentiary. All in less than twenty-four hours. On Monday two men, one of them from Kansas City, held up and robbed a bank at Kingston, Ok. Within an hour they were under arrest and part of the money was recovered. The following day, Tuesday, they were brought to tiral at Madill; were convicted, sentenced to twenty-five years each and were started immediately to the penitentiary. Again, in less than twenty-four hours.

That kind of procedure takes all the profit out of the bandit business. It makes crime generally unpopular. It takes all the imagined heroism out of the hold-up trade and leaves the bandit and the thug a sorry spectacle, without a shred of pride in their profession. It creates public confidence in law enforcement officials and in the courts. It protects society. It is mighty good business and ought not to be so rare that it attracts particular attention.

Famous Pets Of Famous People

The Charge That Helped Wellington to Defeat Napoleon

BY PRESTON WRIGHT.

Almost since man began to make war, the horse has been well acquainted with battlefields. This is the story of a very famous warhorse.

Every boy and girl knows about the battle of Waterloo and can tell without halting the names of the great generals who took part in it, from Napoleon, Wellington and Blucher down to many of the lesser marshals. But probably few can give the name of the Duke of Wellington's charger, which won undying fame on the day that Bonaparte met his tragic disaster.

After both the Duke and his charger had passed on, the second Duke of Wellington erected two monuments at Strathfieldsave, the scene of their declining days and deaths. One was for his father, one was for his horse, Copenhagen.

The inscription on the old horse's stone to this day keeps green the memory of his share in the victory of Waterloo. It reads:

"Here lies Copenhagen,
"Born 1808, Died 1836.
"God's Humble Instrument, Though Meaner Clay,
"Should Share the Glory of That Famous Day."

And indeed Copenhagen does deserve to "share the glory of that famous day." Not once during the long hours during which Wellington matched his brains against Napoleon's was his mind distracted by thoughts of an inefficient, or troublesome mount.

From four o'clock in the morning until ten o'clock at night Copenhagen unceasingly bore Wellington upon his back. He had eighteen solid hours of strenuous leg work, but never a sign of fatigue did he show.

He was not a large horse, but he was strong and courageous.

When, at ten o'clock, Wellington finally dismounted, Copenhagen neighed and kicked up his heels, disconcerting the groom who was leading him away for a feed and rubdown.

But then Copenhagen was born to be a warhorse. His mother was Lady Catherine, herself a famous charger belonging to Field Marshal Lord Grosvenor. Her son first saw light on the field of battle, for his birth came during the siege of Copenhagen. That was how he got his name.

Wellington bought him for 400 guineas in 1813, when he was five years old. His fancy was caught by the young horse's style and his color, which was chestnut. The Battle of Waterloo came two years later, in 1815.

With peace once more holding sway, Copenhagen began a life of quiet content at Strathfieldsave. His sole duty was to take the Duke a-riding. Nine years of this and at sixteen he became a privileged pensioner, to remain so for twelve more years.

During this period he was ridden only twice, each time by the Duke's oldest son, the Marquis of Duoro.

But the Duke never forgot him. He visited him daily, and he never went up to London without proceeding to pet Copenhagen a bit, feed him some candy and bid him goodbye. He never came back without being greeted by the old horse's nicker.

It seems tragic that after his death, poor Copenhagen should have suffered a humiliating mutilation. But when Wellington returned from London and walked down to the stables for the funeral of his beloved charger, he saw that the right fore foot had been cut off.

The old soldier flew into a terrible rage. If the malefactor could have been discovered he would have suffered dire punishment. But his identity remained secret and the act could only be ascribed to some morbid memento seeker.

In 1866, years after the first Duke had been laid to rest, an old servant brought a parcel to the second Duke.

"I am about to die," he said, "and before I go I wish to place in your hands what belongs to you."

The parcel was opened. It contained the hoof of Copenhagen. "I have kept it thirty years," said the aged retainer.

It appeared that at the time he had removed the hoof he saw no harm in what he was doing. But in view of the Duke's blighting rage he dared not reveal what he had done.

While the rest of us are looking for truth in the book of life the cynic spends his time searching for small flows in the punctuation.

The Address Helps "Information" to Save Your Time

Sometimes you cannot find a telephone number in the directory and it becomes necessary to call "Information."

In a city of this size, there may be several people with the same initials and name. By giving "Information" the address in addition to the initials and name, it enables her to determine without delay which person you want.

Before calling "Information" it is always best to make sure that the telephone number you want does not appear in the directory.

Besides the usual quarter numbrs to be presented at Trinity M. E. church next Sunday, Estelle Kiehnhoff, soprano, and Nina Wakelin, contralto, will sing the duet from Gaul's "Holy City." They Shall Hunger No More Nor Thirst.' Wesley Clark, tenor, will be the soloist in the evening.

The Bel Canto oratorio society will meet for the fall organization and rehearsal on Tuesday night, September 20, in the studios. At that time a definite week night will be arranged for the usual reharsal, from 7 to 8:30. Members will provide themselves with copies of the oratorio, "Elijah." All members are expected to be present promptly at 7 o'clock.

More men's voices are desired for the Bel Canto oratorio society. Free try-outs with the director, Miss Robbins, by special appointment. The membership in the oratorio chorus is limited to fifty voices. A large waiting list has been accepted.

No tuition is exacted from the active members of the oratorio society, these being members of the studio. A few associate membrs, non-students with any teacher, will be accepted at a small tuition.

RADIO ELECTRIC CO. MOVES INTO LARGER STORE

Announcement is made today of the change of location of the Radio Electric Co. from 232 South Twelfth street to 236 South Twelfth street. While the move is only one door south of the old location, the space which will be occupied by the radio concern is twice as large.

The Radio Electric Co. is the authorized Lincoln dealer for the Atwater Kent radio. Increased business necessitated the move to more spacious quarters. The move will bring a better and more completely fitter service department in addition to a repair department for all makes of radios.

Additional display space is provided in the new shop for the many new models which have recently been released by the Atwater Kent Co.

ELSIE BAKER IS TO BROADCAST

Philadelphia Contralto Will Give Next Atwater Kent Program.

Elsie Baker, well known American contralto, will again broadcast in the Atwater Kent hour, September 11. She was last heard in these Sunday night concerts at Christmas time, in a mixed choir.

Miss Baker has sung in concert throughout the United States, and is also well known through her Victor records. Two of her popular recorded songs will close her radio concert, Sunday.

Born in Philadelphia, Elsie Baker as a child was possessed of unusual musical talent and until the age of sixteen studied to become a concert pianist. At that age, however, her voice showed such remarkable fine quality that she was urged to take up singing. Soon she became Philadelphia's most noted singer.

Unusually Long Program.

She sings with equal facility in English, French, German and Italian, and has appeared widely with symphonies, operatic performances, oratorio, and recitals.

Her radio program, which is unusually long, will be presented from station WEAF, at 9:15 eastern daylight time, as follows:

Ombra Mai Fu (Haendel's Largo) Haendel.
Maria's Wiegenlied, M. Reger.
Alleluja, Mozart.
When You're Away, Rosemunde.
The Nightingale Has a Lyre of Gold, (W. E. Henley), Whelpley.
The Little Shepherd's Song, (William A. Percy,) Clara Edwards.
Awake Beloved (Thekla Hollingsworth), Clara Edwards.
Sleepy Hollow Time (Bertram Fosdick), Richard Kountz.
Come to the Fair (Helen Taylor), Easthope Martin.
Spring Song of the Robin Woman (from the opera, "Shanewis"), (Nellie R. Ebenhart), Charles Wakefield Cadman.

Radio Digest

Worth Remembering.

Alternating currents, if it accidentally gets into the telephone receivers in good quantity, will destroy the magnetism almost instantly.

Plugs Cleaned With Silver Polish.

Clean the loudspeaker plug occasionally with silver polish. This will keep the plug bright and insure a good connection with the jack on the receiver.

Indoor Aerial Reduces Static.

When troubled with static noises, try an indoor antenna (aerial). Use a short piece of wire, running it around the room under the rug or carpet or up around the picture molding, etc.

Radio an Aid to Deafness.

According to authorities of deafness, the ability to sense sounds is being improved by listening in on the radio. The flood of broadcast sound has caused thousands of deaf to regain their hearing.

Test Tube Efficiency.

The idea of testing the efficiency of tubes by changing them around in a set is a good plan, provided one's reasoning process is sufficiently accurate. A poor tube in the first stage of radio frequency amplification, for example, will not seem quite so poor when used in some other position.

Planning an Underground Antenna.

Interesting experiments may be performed with underground antennas to reduce static pick-up. Ordinary No. 14 rubber-covered electric light wire may be buried several feet deep in a straight trench, and then covered over, with the end brought to the antenna binding post. Be sure the buried free end of the wire is well insulated.

Good Tubes for Tone Quality.

It is necessary to have good tubes to obtain good tone quality in a set. The proper tubes must be employed for the radio-frequency, detector and audio functions. Most important of all, a power tube must be employed in the last stage, so as to handle the full volume without apparent forcing. The proper plate voltages and grid biases where needed, must be applied on the tubes.

Tickler Dial Causes Squalling in Air

If the dials of a regenerative set are carefully handled, there is no reason why that set should radiate and cause ear-piercing whistles. Every user of a regenerative set should remember to turn the tickler dial slowly and carefully. He should never twist it quickly, for if he does he will be making himself the nuisance of the neighborhood. The dial that causes all the trouble is the one that controls the tickler coil, in the majority of sets, or the plate variometer in some of the more old-fashioned outfits. The radio fan knows from experience that the best position of this dial is reached gradually, unlike that of the condenser tuning dial, which is quite sharp in its setting. Now, the trick is to handle the condenser with one hand and the tickler with the other, in such a manner that the sound in the phones caused by the movement of the tickler is always a soft hush. It will be found that by turning the dial just a little more, the hush will end in a sharp click. It is when this click is heard that the set is "oscillating," and at the same time causing a squal to be sent out.

For The Notebook.

Clean aerial connections to insure best results.

Handle the cone type of loud speaker with care. It is a somewhat fragile piece of apparatus and is easily damaged.

In damp weather, an uninsulated aerial will develop much leakage of intercepted radio energy and will prove very unsatisfactory.

Place the "B" eliminator some distance away from the receiver when troubled with a hum. The noise is usually due to magnetic leakage.

A counterpoise is a second antenna placed below the usual antenna and quite close to the ground, serving in place of the usual ground connection.

When trying either an "A" or "B" eliminator to supplant the batteries, be sure to get one with a rectifier that will handle more tubes than are in the set.

To improve reception and to reduce troublesome battery noises, especially when the battery gets weak, place a one or two mfd. condenser across each "B" battery terminal and the minus "B" terminal of the set.

Radiograms.

The United States navy uses radio more extensively than any other Government department.

Delegates from 36 nations will attend the International Radio Telegraph Conference in Washington, D. C., October 4.

Ten-listening-in posts are to be erected in England within a radius of 10 square miles for the purpose of receiving American radio programs.

Radio has been introduced as the newest farm implement by Gustav Schmitz, owner of a large fruit farm near Hornburg, Calif., to scare birds away.

It is being planned to broadcast the latest Broadway musical comedies and reviews once a week from New York City. As many as 15 microphones will be "spotted" in the theater and on the stage for transmission.

It is possible to hear Big Ben strike four miles from Westminster in a quiet neighborhood. Owing to the difference between the speed of wireless and air waves, in many parts of London the clock may be heard to strike 22 times when the 11 a. m. time signal is being broadcast from Daventry through a loud speaker and through the air.

CLUB CHAMPIONS WIN HONORS BY CAREFUL WORK

placed first in the style show came on her own initiative. Washington county has not had its fair, and no clothing contest has been held. The winner was overwhelmed at the honor she received in her first appearance at the state fair, but she had wanted the Washington girls represented, and she came.

Her dress, a two piece rose tan flannel, cost $3.58, and her entire costume $11.05. Eleanor is enthusiastic about sewing, as she finds several frocks now come for the price of one. Besides her award, she will receive a trip to the club congress in Chicago later in the year.

Eleanor may become a journalist. During club week, she wrote the best stories of any of the club trip winners, and she has a real "nose for news." She is taking typewriting as an extra subject in high school, where she is a junior this year. She won the Omaha Journal Stockman trip to club week, and "just thought I'd come again."

C. C. Cole, who brought in a group of boys from Hitchcock county, is a farmer-stockman, with no especial experience in show ring work. He has occasionally attended the fairs, but without paying any attention to the form of showing.

However, three of his boys from Palisade, James Carter, Charles Romine and Stanley placed first, second, and third, respectively, when the judges finished placing the beef cattle showing contest. All of them showed Angus, and for all of them it was the first year in club work.

Mr. Cole is interested in boys, and in farm life. This is the first club in the community and the first calves the boys have ever owned.

"The boys tried their best," Mr. Cole said. "They never had a better time in the summer.

"They learned everything they could about showing, and then put it into practice.

Waverly Lads Study Corn.

"We are going to try to have fifty in our club next year."

The Hitchcock boys brought down the reserve champion Angus, and carried off some other lesser prizes.

A group of Lancaster county boys near Waverly are going to understand the growing of corn. Three of the boys, Harold McCall, Raymond Walker, and Glen Marlof, have ten acre fields, in which the yield will undoubtedly be more satisfactory than it was last year, according to the leader, Erwin Hutchinson. The other boys have smaller plots, in which they test different varieties and demonstrate different methods of growing. Last year, the club had eight members, and this year it numbers seventeen in its membership.

The boys are learning that corn from the south is not adapted to this climate, because it needs a longer season. On the other hand, corn from North Dakota and Minnesota is unsatisfactory, because it does not take advantage of the entire growing season. The boys are also learning of inbreeding, by which hybrid corn is produced. The hybrid corn yields 20 per cent more than other varieties, but new seed must be planted each year, otherwise the yield is reduced one-third in each successive year.

To assure the highest degree of accuracy in our weighing we have installed a new Fairbanks Auto-Truck Scale.

This is one of the finest scales built by Fairbanks and is entirely automatic. The dial shows the correct weight instantly — either total weight or net weight — and readings are taken without calculations of any sort.

We are first in the city of Lincoln and 4th in the entire state of Nebraska with this most modern installation at a cost several times that of an ordinary scale, for your protection.

PAULINE LORD COMES IN FOR HIGH PRAISES

Her Work in Shaw's "Candida" Regarded as Being Especially Good.

Summer Stage Season in Newport is Brought to Glorious Close.

BY BUSHNELL DIMOND.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10—Newport's newborn summer theatrical season ended in one skyrocket of glory and some incidental damp firecrackers. The incessant rain that beat upon the Casino could not extinguish the warm, sane fire of Shaw's "Candida." Nor could the wettest of critical blankets stifle the flame that burned, serene and reassuring, in Bauline Lord. Her characterization was, to six crowded houses a really great experience in the theater; an experience that, it is hoped, will be repeated on Broadway in th early Autumn.

That Miss Lord "got up in" the part in four days is an interesting testament to her energy. It is also quite unimportant. For she strikes me as the sort of woman who might "get up in" anything from "Chicago" to Hauptmann's "Hamnels" in a couple of hours, and manage to shake you deeply. Mannerisms, aspect and other trivial factors aside, she remains a commanding force in the little world of our footlights.

Unlike Others.

This is a "Candida" that makes analysis difficult, because, in the facile glibness of sporting slang, it "has everything." We have had many kinds of "Candida" before—the firm, one-cell "Candida" of Dorothy Donnelly; the crisp amiability of Hilda Spong, the glamorous witchery of Katherine Cornell, the "comfortable" "Candida" of Carroll McComas, the humdrum aggressiveness of Peggy Wood. Miss Lord's "Candida" is no particular kin of these. Instead of taking little snippings from other readings of the role and basting them into an attractive pattern, she has cut her presentment from the whole cloth of Shaw. She is "Candida" "in the round." This suburban housewife, with her humorous, Olympian intelligence, is both mundane and mystic, direct and elusive, hoarding of love and prodigal of affection, practical and prophetic, flashing into anger, soothing as summer rain.

The marvel of the performance is that, in the playing, it is impossible to sift and separate these paradoxical qualities. The worldliness and the celestial sense are not dovetailed, but inter-blended. You cannot say at one moment: "This is an angel strayed from Heaven," or at another: "This is a parson's wife whose fingers smell of onions and lampblack. It's not unlikely that Shaw had some such notion in his head when he wrote the play.

Good Support.

In support of Miss Lord the Newport Casino assembled a cast imposing on paper and, in some instances, in reality. There was a sound and amusing Burgess in Walter Kingsford, leaping numbly to that fat character comedy part from the First Gravedigger in "Hamlet." There was a really superb Morrell in Herbert Ransom—a Morrell of leonine good looks; booming oratory and an infinate capacity for getting his feelings hurt. The youngster who played the curate was also well inside the picture frame.

But the Prossy of Helen Ware, conceived in the broadest of low comedy veins, failed to come off. It was arch and emphatic and the stresses fell heavily on wrong spots. Henry Hull's conception of Marchbanks was a thing to wonder at. With the exception of his touching portrait of the frustrated negro in "Lula Belle," I have never known what Mr. Hull was trying to do, unless possibly to represent a garruious victim of vertigo. His Marchbanks was shrill and simian, with cavortings and writhings and an occasional leer that touched hands with Mr. Hyde or "The Cat and the Canary."

The pace of the production was timed with great skill and the direction by the sagacious Frederick Burt was admirable. But, withal, it was Miss Lord's week. Broadway, immersed in its own hurricane of openings, can afford to pause and envy acting like that in the suburbs.

Atlantic City Beauty Contest Is Not Favored by Movie Men; Winners Only Fickle Favorites

Sad words have just reached the shell pink ears of the beauties now gathering in Atlantic City, each with the hope of being America's Helen. Motion picture producers have decided that beauty isn't the only necessity for film success, and up to date no beauty winner has made a lasting impression on the screen. producers

The producers want new faces, but they're decided that there may be enough beauty in Hollywood, with the hope that some histrionic ability is added. Beauty winners take publicity, and unless they are Duses as well as beauties, the result isn't worth the cost.

If any one can better this record, they'll get some recognition, too. Mrs. Louis Kent of New York City has seen "The Big Parade" for ninety-three consecutive weeks. As long as the picture runs on Broadway, she'll continue to go every Thursday night.

If this new plan goes through, you can't purchase a home next to Milton Sills or some other screen luminary. A group of movie folk are promoting a 128 acre subdivision, where only the lights of the trade may live. Those interested are Milton, Chester Conklin, Laura La Plante, Al Rogell, Lew Cody, Jack Gilbert Edward Montaigne, and William Seiter, who is Laura's husband.

Joan Crawford at West Point.

Just when Joan Crawford could have had a good time that would make her the envy of thousands, she had to go to the hospital. She's making "The West Pointer" with William Haines at West Point, and the cadets have been nice to our Joan. However, the roadster in which Joan and William were going to work got mixed up with an ice truck. Joan had some scalp stitches taken and William has his arm in a sling.

"The Cossacks" will come to the screen with John Gilbert as the star. It's a Tolstoi story.

A thrilling mystery and detective story, "By Whose Hand?" will go into production as soon as there is a cast. Ricardo Cortez and Eugenia Gilbert, who is to play oposite him, are the only two who have been invited to participate.

Claire Windsor is now engaged in "Say It With Sables." A fitting background for the blonde, Claire.

Marie in "On to Reno."

"On to Reno" is to be James Cruze's first Pathe-DeMille picture since he joined the organization. Marie Prevost is starring in the type of picture to which she is best fitted, a sophisticated comedy-drama, and Cullen Landis has the leading male role, with Ned Sparks as the character man.

Over at the Chadwick studios, Betty Compson is to be starred and Pauline Garon and Armand Kaliz featured in "Temptations of a Shop Girl." Now if L. J. Libby ever did better on a title, bring it forth.

As soon as May McAvoy finished "Roulette," on which she is now engaged, she is to play in "If I Were Single." Andre Beranger has been signed to play her support.

Glenn Tryon will play the featured supporting role in "Thanks for the Buggy Ride." Laura La Plante is the lady who presumably says "thanks."

Harold Lloyd Detained.

Marguerite de La Motte and Donald Keith have the principal roles in "Broadway Madness." As soon as that picture is done, Pat O'Malley and Gladys Hulette come on to their stage for "Bowery Rose."

Madge Bellamy, Mary Duncan, Marjorie Beeve, Joseph Cawthorn, and Arthur Housman are cast in "Very Confidential."

If the weather doesn't change, Harold Lloyd will not have his next picture out on schedule. He's making his next comedy in New York, the first time he's left Sunny California for picture purposes, and he has been able to work but sixteen hours in fourteen days. He expected to remain in the east about two months, but if the weather continues to defy him, he'll not get the boys out of the trenches until Chrsitmas.

As soon as Louise Fazenda gets through being the socially ambitious wife of the Congressman-at-Large, Will Rogers, in "A Texas Steer," she's going to take a few days off to get married. She's marrying a newspaper man, Hal Wallis, head of Warner brothers publicity department on the Pacific coast.

May Film "Abie's Rose."

If "Abie's Irish Rose" lasts much longer in New York, it may have competition from the movie version. Ann Nichols is due in Hollywood to confer on manners and means. Work will evidently start rather soon, as Victor Fleming, about to do another Jannings film, has been relieved to prepare the Nichols work for filming. Joseph Von Sternberg is to replace Fleming as director of the new Jannings film.

Did you see Charlie Paddock when he ran around the stadium cinders in his sky blue outfit? In "The High Schobl Hero," "the world's fastest human" is a track team coach. Sally Phipps and Nick Stuart have the leads.

The supoprting cast for "The Gorilla," in which Charlie Murray and Fred Kelsey play the leads, has been selected. Tully Marshall and Claude Gillingwater as William and Cyrus Townsend, are the two principal mysterious characters. Dorothy Revier, as Alice Townsend, the main feminine member of the cast, Walter Pidgeon as Lawrence Stevens, Gaston Glass as Marsden, Brooks Bennett the smart-cracking reporter, and Syd Cross the butler, and Aggie Herring the temperamental cook.

"The Girl From Gay Paree" has been completed, and is now being edited and titled. The cast includes: Lowell Sherman, Barbara Bedford, Malcolm McGregor, Walter Hiers, Betty Blythe, Margaret Livingston and others.

Ramon Novarro, reports say, will be a movie hero no more after Christmas. The same report says he will enter a monastery, toward which his thoughts have long turned. He has never intended to stay permanently in the films, it is said.

MR. JOHN HOLDEN.

Mr. John Holden, the new leading man with The Pierre Watkin Players, is a graduate of the University of Michigan. He founded the Spanish Players Club at the University and is a fraternity man, being a member of the Theta Delta Chi. Last season Mr. Holden was with the National Players at Kansas City, Mo., for 42 weeks and was a great favorite with the theater fans of that city.—Adv.

Screen Siftings

Use Big Bowl.—The Hollywood Bowl, a natural theater set in the hills above Hollywood and one of the biggest attractions in southern California, served as a setting last week for the Universal feature, "The Symphony." Jean Hersholt, star of the picture, and George Lewis and Marian Nixon, who have featured roles, mingled with the crowd while the necessary scenes were being shot. The average attendance at the concerts is 65,000 nightly. "The Symphony" is a screen version of the famous story by Sven Gade. The picture is being made on a lavish scale under the direction of F. Harmon Weight.

Wanted Real Birds.—The "Two Black Crows" will be featured in "Shootin' Irons," but these are the feathered variety and their stuffed doubles. When Richard Rosson director, on location at Lone Pine, Calif., sent in to the property department for two black crows, some one rushed him the popular phonograph record. The director wired that his need was imperative and to "rush the real birds." Jack Luden is playing his first starring role in "Shootin' Irons" and Sally Blane is the feminine interest.

Daughters in Movies—Two daughters of former famous screen stars are now occuied in making pictures at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. Lenore Bushman, daughter of the famous Francis X. Bushman, is supporting Marion Davies in "The Fair Co-ed," and Helen Costello, Maurice's daughter, is playing opposite James Murray in "In Old Kentucky."

Flier to Act.—Art Goebel, the aviator who won the Dole prize of $25,000 on the recent Hawaiian flight, appears in five Universal pictures which will be released this fall. Mr. Goebel is a close friend of Al Wilson, the noted stunt aviator and takes the part of the star's bully in the series of pictures which Mr. Wilson made for Universal. The features are "Sky High Saunders," "Three Miles Up," "Won in the Clouds," "The Air Patrol" and "The Sky Rider."

Dog Has Role.—"Jean," the Scotch collie who won recognition for her intelligence in "Mighty Lak a Rose," will be seen as the companion to Dolores del Rio in "Ramona." "Jean" has appeared in over 100 pictures. "Ramona" is coming to the screen exactly as Helen Hunt Jackson tells the story, according to Edwin Carewe, the director. Warner Baxter will appear as Alesandro, the Indian lover of the heroine. The part of Don Felipe is still unfilled.

Deserts Screen.—Eugene O'Brien has deserted the screen temporarily to take part in a vaudeville tour over the Orpheum circut, from California to New York.

Spreckles, the banker and sugar magnate. John Gilbert and Harry Carey are other members of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot who have taken to the sea in ships. Mr. Gilbert's yacht has been christened "The Temptress."

Leaves Mack Sennett.—Ruth Lee Taylor, the blonde from Mack Sennett comedies, who has gone over to the Paramount lot as the Lorelei of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," will be right at home in the picture. Anita Loos, who wrote the famous story, was once a member of the Sennett scenario department. Ford Sterling, at one time a captain of the Sennett police force, will have the role of Gus Eisman, Chicago button king, in the Loos satire, and Malcolm St. Clair, who will direct Miss Taylor, was formerly a Keystone cop.

Answers to Movie Fans

Dear Movie Editor—Well, I am back for more addresses. I will only spring a few on you now so that you won't think I've gone suddenly insane. They are: Joan Crawford, Lois Moran, Patsy Ruth Miller, Clive Brook, Elinor Fair, Jetta Goudal, William Haines, Phyllis Haver, and Marguerite de la Motte. A few, did I say? Pardon me, I just didn't know where to stop. Oh, yes, I'd like to have Alice Terry's too, please.

Look 'Em Over.

Suppose you are staying at home to-night,
You're tired of going to social affairs,
Bored and disgusted with highbrow stuff,
With acting just so, and putting on airs;
You want to be quiet and still for a change,
Yet you have to have something to do,
And there's nothing that makes time fly faster than
This which I'm suggesting to you.
Get out those books that you buy every month,
The Screenland, the Classic, you've got them somewhere,
The good Motion Picture, the Photoplay, too,
Don't kid me, I know they're there.
Start with the Picture Play, it's a safe bet,
Though the Classic might be a bit better yet,
Oh! I guess they're all good and rank just the same.
There's only one difference, and that is the name.
There are books that you bought about two years ago.
And yet you have kept them, you cared for them so.
Then there are books that you bought yesterday
Because they had pictures of stars that you know.
Look 'em over, I say, and learn all that's good
About what goes on in that famed Hollywood.
Read who is married, and who's single yet
Who lost a hundred because of a bet?
Oh, yes, a nice way to get rid of the blues
Is to sit down and read all the Hollywood news.
Don't mind me, I'm just the spirit of poetry.
I was told to name three blondes for my choice for "Loselei."
They are: Phyllis Haver, Laura La Plant and Dorothy Mackaill.
JINGO JUMBO.

The fans will be mighty happy to-day to have you back with them again.

The momentous question as to who will play "Lorelei" has already been decided, and not one fan happened to name her. Ruth Lee Taylor, the little blonde in Mack Sennett comedies, was the lucky winner of the role.

I'll do my best with the addresses, and you will have to take your chances on finding the free-lance players. Joan Crawford and William Haines are at home at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio. They both happen to be out on location at the present writing but a letter sent to Culver City will be forwarded to them.

Address Miss Moran at the First National studio, Burbank, Calif. Patsy Ruth Miller drives out Cahuenga Pass each morning to the Universal studio at that famous little city of that name.

Write Mr. Brook in care of Paramount-Famous-Lasky studio, 5451 Marathon avenue, Hollywood, Calif.

Elinor Faire, Jetta Goudal and Phyllis Haver work at the Cecil B. De Mille lot, Culver City, Calif. Miss de la Motte gives us her home address, 1401 Fairfax avenue, Los Angeles, Calif.

Dear Movie Editor—When you said that it's too much of an effort for a member of the femanine sex to keep quiet for any length of time, your surely hit the nail on the head. If I had not seen "Fighting Love," I might have kept still. Victor Varconi was surely wonderful. To my notion he somes at the head of the Gilbert-Colman-Dix contest. Why do we not see more of him and his winning smiles? Here's hoping we do. Could qou tell me his age, color of hair and eyes and where I could secure a picture of him?

His will be the first picture I have ever sent for, so you can imagine how hard I fell for him. I have hunted far and wide for a favorite male star and now he has turned up, Victor is "it." Do you know of any future pictures he will be in?

George K. Arthur was too cute for words in "When the Wife's Away." Wasn't he some flapper? And oh! those dimples!

Greta Garbo is a favorite actress of mine. I cannot agree with my sister as to how her name is pronounced. Perhaps you can straighten us out. Is it pronuonced as "Greeta" or just "Greta"? We have heard it pronounced both ways and are in doubt as to which is correct.

Fritzi and I step right along together when it comes to discussing Bill Haines. But in "Slide, Kelly, Slide," he seemed too much of a big overgrown kid. Maybe it was the derby he wore. He sure looked funny and kiddish in that.

"La Boheme" is the most wonderful picture I have ever seen. Maybe it was because it got my tear-dropper working for the first time at a movie.

My dad thinks that Karl Dane is the one and only star in the world for him. He went crazy over Karl in "The Big Parade" and has been crazy ever since, I mean over Karl, so I suppose I will have to get a picture of Karl and hang it in his room. Could you supply me with his address? What are his next features?

I am not going to take up any more of your time, so you will have lots of time in which to tell me all about Victor Varconi. I am STILL BOOSTING FOR VICTOR.

It's just a shame you had to wait so long for word concerning your favorite. Looks as though Mr. DeMille is able to pick winners among the men as well as among the women. Victor was in this country several years ago making pictures, and then returned to his native land, Hungary, where he was leading man in the National theater at Budapest.

However, when Cecil B. De Mille thought of making "The Volga Boatman," he could think of no other actor who could play the part as well as Victor. A persuasive wire to Mr. Varconi from the producer brought your favorite back to Hollywood. And Mr. De Mille's faith in him was justified. He has the role of Pontius Pilate in "The King Of Kings." You will see him soon in "The Forbidden Woman" and "The Angel of Broadway." Mr. Varconi was born in 1890 with dark hair and eyes. He is married. Write him at the Cecil B. De Mille studio, Culver City, Calif.

Greta's name is pronounced with a long "E."

And to think that William's charms are just being discovered after five years before the camera!

Karl Dane and George K. Arthur are being featured together again as a comedy team in "Olga From Volga." Address Mr. Dane at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot, Culver City, Calif.

Dear Movie Editor—This is my first attempt to write to you, so I hope I am welcome. I think the "Answers to Movie Fans" is terribly interesting.

I am nearly full to the brim with questions, so here goes. Where could I get a picture of Richard Dix, Thomas Meighan, Jack Holt, Fred Thomson, Silver King, Ken Maynard and Tarzan?

Will you please tell me all about the following, their age, birthplace and so forth: Fred Thomson, Ken Maynard, Richard Dix, Vera Reynolds and Mary Brian?

My favorites are Fred Thomson, Ken Maynard and Mary Brian.

In the Pickford-Nilsson contest, I vote for Mary.

This is enough for the first time, and I hape it misse sthe W. P. B. A MOVIE BUG of Broken Bow.

Modesty and tact forbade my publishing your letter verbatim, so I tamed it down a little, but I do appreciate your kind opinion of this department.

Address Paramount - Famous - Lasky studio for pictures of Richard Dix, Thomas Meighan and Jack Holt. Mr. Holt is no longer with the company, but your letter will be forwarded. Reginald Denny is busy at the Universal lot, Universal City, Calif., and Ken Maynard and Tarzan release their pictures through First National studios, Burbank, Calif. Address Mr. Thomson and Silver King in care of F. B. O. Studios, 780 Gower St., Hollywood, Calif.

Fred Thomson was born at Pasadena, Calif., in 1890, so he really grew up with the movies, but it was not until he married a scenario writer, Frances Marion, that he really took them seriously. Fred started out to be minister, and served as chaplain during the World War. It was here that he met Miss Marion. They have a baby son now, and Mr. Thomson is becoming almost as famous as a western star, as Miss Marion is a sa scenarist.

Mr. Maynard is a native of Texas. He studied to be a civil engineer, but learned to ride and rope during his summers on the ranch. One summer he joined a wagon show and discovered that he liked the show business. He kept right on going to the top, in spite of his parents objection, until he became star rider in such circuses as Sells Floto, Robinson's and Barnum and Bailey. He made his first debut before the camera as Paul Revere in "Janice Meredith," which introduced himb to motion picture fans as a horseman of no mean ability. He now heads his own company as a star in western pictures.

Richard Dix is one of the most popular bachelors of the screen. He was born in St. Paul, Minn. in 1894. He has dark hair and eyes, like Mr. Maynard, and started his career as a stage player. It was rough sledding for a time, but Mr. Dix finally played opposiet such celebrities as Faversham. It was while he was playing in Morosco stock in Los Angeles that he became interested in the movies, and cast his lot with Goldwyn. He is now a star in Paramount productions.

Vera Reynolds is a native of Richmond, Va., but has lived in Southren California most of her life. She was born in 1901, and has played in pictures since her grammar school days. She received her big opportunity from Cecil B. De Mille, who selected her for the feminine lead in "Feet of Clay." She is now a featured player in Mr. De Mille's company, and has been seen in such pictures as "The Road to Yesterday," "The Million Dollar Handicap" and "Silence."

Mary Brian was one of those lucky girls who was chosen for a "Peter Pan" role. You will remember her as "Wendy," the child mother of the little Lost Boys. It was Mary's first important screen role, but she had had a part in a theatre prologue in Los Angeles.

Mary was born in Corsicana, Texas, in 1908 with brown eyes and hair. She spent her early days on a ranch, where she learned to ride. It was her intention to become an illustrator or designer, and she went to Los Angeles to study art. A beauty contest and charming personality contest which she won persuaded her to seek a film career.

Your vote makes Mary even with Anna. They have three each, if my records are correct.

Dear Movie Editor—We have a friend living in Hollywood and through her we have been fortunate enough to learn about the looks of a number of the movie stars as they appear off the silver screen.

What a disappointment some of them are: Mary Pickford, for instance, is not good-looking at all. Mae Murray is a middle-aged lady. Norma and Constance Talmadge are Jewesses.

Claire Windsor, Mae McAvoy, Corinne Griffith, Clara Bow, John Gilbert, Ronald Colman and Richard Dix are all just as good looking off the screen as they are on.

Now for some questions. Could you tell us the name of the picture in which Ronald Colman appeared as a Gipsy and Vilma Banky played opposite him? It appeared at the Lincoln theater a number of weeks ago.

We would like to have the cast for "Lost at Sea," and "Rough House Rosie."

Do you know what church the following attend: Clara Bow, Mae McVoy, Marion Davies, Viola Dana, Bessie Love, Gloria Swanson, Billie Dove, Richard Dix, John Gilbert, Ronald Colman and Ralph Forbes.

We enjoy your mail immensely and kindly thank you fore answering your questions. "TWO PEAS IN A POD."

It's just a question as to whether you call Miss Pickford good looking on the screen, how she looks off, because I think she looks very much the same, except that her curls are "done up."

Mae Murray is thirty-four, hardly middle aged even in real life. When I saw her two years ago she could have easily passed for twenty.

If you should pass Clara Bow on the streets of Lincoln, you wouldn't know her. She has very brilliant red hair, but a pleasing personality, nevertheless. The camera has a faculty for ferreting out the "It" that Elinor Glynn features so much, and many of the beauties off screen, become commonplace before the camera. Of course the opposite is also true. I have met a great many of the screen players, and would have known the majority of them just from their screen appearance. Many of them are glorified before the camera, while others are better looking in real life than on the celluloid.

Mr. Colman was the Gypsy hero of "One Night of Love."

I can give you "Lost at the Front," "Lost, a Wife," "The Lost Lady," "The Lost Chord," "Lost or Found," "The Lost World," etc., but not "Lost at Sea." It might be a thrilling, but not a very pleasant experience.

The cast for "Rough House Rose" is: "Rosie O'Reilly," Clara Bow; 'Joe Hennessey," Reed Howes; 'Kid Farrell," Arthur Housman; "Ruth," Doris Hill; "Arthur Russell," Douglas Gilmore; "Lew McKay," John Miljan; "W. S. Davids," Henry Kolker.

Very few players tell their religious affiliations, and I am unable to tell you where any of those you named worship.

Dear Movie Editor—"Hello, Editor!" How's the weather up there? Pretty warm here.

I have changed my favorites, so now I've got to tell you about them.

First, I'm going to tell you who they are: Clara Bow is first; Vilma Banky, second; Greta Garbo, third; Lya de Putti, fourth; Jetta Goudal, fifth, and last, but certainly not least, is that little Louise Brooks. Also Pola Negri and Gloria Swanson are not forgotten either. I think Lois Moran is real sweet, too.

Very seldom do we see Aileen Pringle. May I ask the reason for this? I think she is very good. Joan Crawford is also very good. Is she a bathing beauty?

Please tell me about Renee Adoree. I certainly like her, except for one thing. She dies in all her pictures, almost.

Dorothy Gish is very pretty. When is "The City" coming this direction?

I'm just wild to see "The Tender Hour." I think it will be a wonderful show.

Has Nita Naldi forsaken the screen? Poor Nita, she certainly was a heart breaker in her pictures, but somehow I always liked her in her plays. I'm not wild about vamp plays anymore, though.

Could you tell me when these shows are coming to Nebraska, or in this section of the state: "The World at Her Feet," "Rolled Stockings," "The Secret Studio," "Time to Love," "The Stolen Bride" and "The Poor Nut?" I notice these are being advertised very much. I believe th most of them will be good.

I think Blanche Sweet is a very sweet girl. What is her next picture? Also the next picture of Carmel Myers, Pauline Starke, Norma Shearer, Virginia Valli and Renee Adoree.

I am very sorry about Charles Emmett Mack. He was such a good actor in "The Unknown Soldier." Thanking you in advance, TESSIE, Fairbury, Neb.

Howdy, Tessie. It's a good day for a swim down here.

You have so many favorites, I know you love them all.

Fou are going to see Aileen more frequently in the future. She is working every day at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio where she is being teamed with Lew Cody. "Mixed Marriages" is their next feature.

We shall have to ask them to let Renee live in just one picture, but then she dies so beautifully! I think she's adorable, too. She was born in Lille, France and was raised in the environment of the sawdust ring, gathering her education as she went from town to town. She later graduated to the stage as a dancer, and was dancing in a theater in Brussels at the time of the German invasion.

She fled to London, where she danced for a while, but finally got discouraged because of the air raids and went to Australia. It was not until after the armistice that Miss Adoree came to this country. She had leading roles in stage shows in New York before making her way to California and motion pictures.

It was "The Eternal Struggle" that elevated Miss Adoree close to the top in pictures, and "The Big Parade" finished the business." You will see her next in "Rose Marie."

Watch the Star "ads" for "The City." I don't recall seeing it here yet.

Nita went to Europe, and she seems to be having such a good time over there that she hates to return. We may see her again in the future if she can stand up under the buttermilk diet. The films accentuate the figure, and Nita's doesn't need accentuating, even for vamp roles.

"The World at Her Feet" and "Rolled Stockings" were here in June. I don't see all of the pictures, quite, so perhaps I have missed the others, but anyhow The Star ads will always announce them in plenty of time for you to see, and are more authentic than I could be, because the program might be changed at the last minute, then I'd be "in bad" with you.

Blanche is just recovering from an operation. She isn't working in pictures at present.

Norma has completed the role of "Kathie" in "The Student Prince," and also "After Midnight." She is now being featured as the future Mrs. Irving Thalberg. Pauline Starke is vacationing, and enjoying the role of Jack White's fiancee. Carmel Myers is between pictures at present, mourning the loss of her mother, and Virginia Valli is preparing to do "Ladies Must Dress."

Joan Crawford is a recruit from the Follies. She was formerly known as Lucile Le Seur.

Blondy. You will find your question pertaining to Richard and Mary answered in "A Movie Bug's" letter. Your choice for "Lorelei" was well chosen, but Ruth Taylor has been awarded the role. I hope you will visit us again soon. The fans will be interested in knowing that you received a lovely photograph of Clara, just for the asking.

Pearl, Patches, Interested, Blue Eyes, Eve of Tobbie, your letters are first on the list for next Sunday. There are many others, too, so fans if your letter doesn't appear today, don't think it has been fed to the W. P. B.

Vamp in "Pretty Clothes."—Gertrude Astor, the famous blonde vamp, is to start a featured role in "Pretty Clothes" this week under the direction of Phil Rosen. Mary Carr and Johnny Walker are also prominent in the cast. The picture will go into production at the Universal studio. Miss Astor will also have a role in "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris," which William Beaudine will produce for Universal. She spends most of her time on the Universal lot as a free-lance player, but declined a long term contract proffered her by the company.

Now an Author.—Ralph Graves is stepping forth as author, director and leading man in "Roulette," which Warner Brothers will film. The title is a temporary one, and May McAvoy is to star in the story.

Heavily Laden Trees in Hardin Peach Orchard

The above pictures were taken in the peach orchard owned by A. C. Hardin, 6518 Holdrege street, showing the heavily laden trees. Mr. Hardin has four Elberta trees that he set out four years ago. This year a crop of three bushels of unusually large peaches was harvested from these four trees. Mr. Hardin brought several specimens of the fruit to the Star office where they were weighed and measured. Three of the peaches totaled one pound nine and a half ounces in weight. They averaged more than a half pound each and more than ten inches in circumference. They are of extra fine quality.

Mr. Hardin also has twenty volunteer peach trees that grew from discarded seeds in a former rabbit pen. Several bushels of the fruit were gathered from these trees. They are also four years old. The small trees are loaded so heavily with the fruit that it was necessary to tie them together and also to support the branches to keep them from breaking.

A large grape arbor, developed from twelve original vines, is another of Mr. Hardin's pets. The grapes are large with unusually tender skins. About fourteen bushels of the grapes comprise this year's harvest. Both the grapevines and the peach trees bore equally well last year, Mr. Hardin says.

University Notes

More than 2,200 students of the university have completed registration begun before they left the campus early this summer. This number is slightly over three-fourths of the total number of the early registrations. Enrollment of new students begins Monday and continues through Wednesday.

E. F. Schramm, professor of geology, brought back from southern Kansas a number of oil specimens which will be used for commens parative study in geology classes and for exhibts in the university museum.

Professor J. E. Almy of physics department returned recently from a three months' tour of the Pacific coast, where he visited several universities.

A noon hour broadcasting period for the college of agriculture has been added to the schedule of the university radio station, operating through KFAB. "Farm Family Fax by Mr. and Mrs. Cornhusker," will be broadcast from 12:30 to 12:45 each Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday, in addition to the regular college of agriculture broadcasting from 7:30 to 8 on Monday and Wednesday evenings.

Miss Nancy Lee Farley of Greenridge, Mo., has been appointed part time instructor in the history and principles of education, her work to cover part of the teaching formerly done by G. W. Rosenlof, who recently resigned from the teachers college. Miss Farley holds a degree of bachelor of science in education from the Warrensburg Normal school, Warrensburg, Mo., and the degree of master of arts from the University of Chicago.

The university museum has received a large mastodon tooth from William Graham of the Lyman - Richey Sand company at Meadow, Nebr. Mr. Graham found the tooth September 5 while working about fifty feet below the surface in gravel pits near Meadow, and turned it over to State Gravel Inspector Finity for delivery to the museum.

Miss Laveda Zutter and Miss Marjorie Shanafelt, assistants in the university museum, spent three days in Chicago recently studying museum methods and arrangements.

Professor T. T. Smith of the physics department spent the early part of the summer in Columbia, Mo., and Louisville, Ky., and took his vacation during August in Colorado.

The first of a series of educational films was shown at the university mu eum this week for state fair visitors. It was "Animal Camouflage," a film dealing with the lower animals whose appearance resembles their surroundings and serve as "camouflage." A series of such films will be shown at the museum lecture room on the lower floor of Morrill hall during the year, on Saturday morning for school children and on Sunday afternoons for visitors.

Three changes in the faculty of the physics department are announced by Dr. H. H. Marvin, chairman of the department. Marion E. Russell, formerly an instructor in physics has accepted a position in the research department of the Eastman Kodak company, Rochester, N. Y., and Maurice J. Brevoort, also an instructor, has been appointed professor of physics at Huron college, Huron, S. D. Henry Margenau is to study for a doctor's degree on a fellowship in physics at Yale. The three instructors appointed to fill the vacancies are Dr. Henry E. Stauss from the University of California; Harold K. Schilling, who is on leave of absence from Union college at College View; and Everett W. Thacher, who was an assistant last year at Purdue university.

So that the huge specimens in "Elephant hall" of the university museum might have a proper environment, Elizabeth Dolan, New York artist who is painting the exhibition cases in Morrill hall, spent part of the summer in western Nebraska where the fossil remains of early elephants and other creatures were found. Miss Dolan sketched scenes at Devil's Gulch, Long Pine, Crawford, and the Bad Lands country and she is now engaged in transferring these views to the large walls in "Elephant hall," where the museum's collection of specimens will be mounted.

Don Hale has been appointed graduate assiseant in the department of physics. Mr. Hale is a graduate of York college and has been teaching at Milford.

A varied collection of large butterflies and moths, all common in Nebraska, has been received by the university museum.

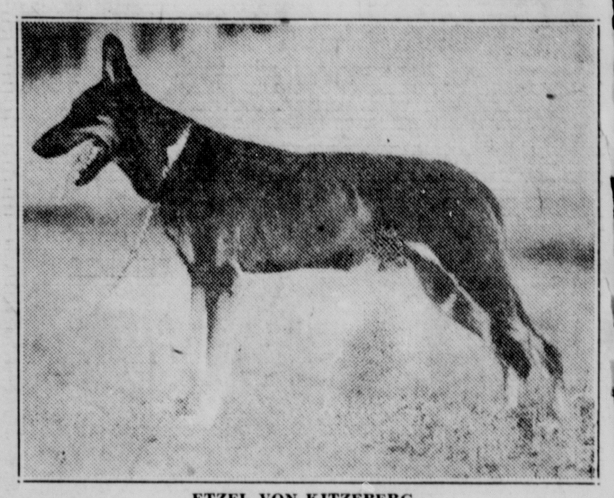

Acting Chancellor E. A. Burnett and Dr. E. H. Barbour, curator of the university museum, recently paid a visit to Charles H. Morrill at his home in Stromsburg.

Prof. F. W. Upson of the chemistry department and his wife and son returned this week from a month's vacation at Esterbrook, Colo. Professor H. G. Deming, also of the chemistry department, spent the summer in the east.
